

Hells Canyon Dam Action Doomed At This Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any hope for action at this session of congress on a bill to authorize a federal Hells Canyon power project disappeared.

The House Interior Committee won't act on the bill in the closing days of the session, Chairman Engle (D-Calif.) told a reporter.

The bill to authorize a big federal dam in the Hells Canyon area of the Snake River between Idaho and Oregon wasn't brought up at Friday's meeting of the committee, the last one scheduled for this session.

Engle told a reporter he was not discriminating against the Hells Canyon bill but felt that it along with many other bills, some of them controversial, "would have to go over until next session."

A House Reclamation subcommittee approved the bill Wednesday. It would authorize construction totaling 464 million dollars.

The subcommittee vote was along party lines, 14-13, with Democrats favoring the proposal and Republicans opposing it.

A similar bill is pending before the Senate Interior Committee.

The Hells Canyon project has for a long time been the center of a private vs public power controversy.

Some two years ago Secretary of the Interior McKay withdrew the Interior Department's opposition to an Idaho Power Co. application to the Federal Power Commission for a license to build three smaller dams in the same area.

The company's application is pending.

How To Hold False Teeth More Firmly in Place

Do your false teeth annoy and embarrass by slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, laugh or talk? Just sprinkle a little PASTEETH on your plates. This alkaline (non-acid) powder holds false teeth more firmly and more comfortably. No gummy, gooey, nasty taste or feeling. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath).
