Deadline Cited Vets On Training Loan Applications

Veterans Administration reminded World War II veterans that they have until July 25, 1955, in which to complete GI training and two years from today in which to apply for GI loans.

July 25, 1956 marks the end of the education program for all but a few of the World War II veterans now in training under the original GI Bill.

GI training payments to schools and veterans will stop on that date even though a veteran may still have unused training entitlement or be in the middle of a course.

The GI loan program, now at peak activity, has two more years to run, coming to end for practically all World War II on July 25, 1957.

The small group of veterans exempted from these two deadlines are those who enlisted or reenlisted under the Armed Forces Voluntary Recruitment Act between October 6, 1945 and October 5, 1946. These veterans have nine years from the end of their enlistment or reenlistment to finish GI training and ten years to apply for GI loans.

More than 90 per cent of the loans — 3,750,000 — were for the purchase of homes. Business loans totalled 220,000 and farm loans numbered 67,000.

More than 7,800,000 — or half of all who served in World War II

— received some sort of education or training under the GI Bill since 1944.

The peak of the GI Bill education and training program was reached in 1947 when more than 2,300,000 World War II veterans were in schools, on-the-job training establishments, or on farms throughout the country.

Only about 138,000 World War II veterans are still in training under the original GI Bill.
