Lookingglass Boy Falls From Car

By HAZEL MARSH
Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Buckle nearly experienced an accident Saturday morning as they were returning from Roseburg. The rear door of their car swung open and their 2-year-old son, Allan, fell from the car. They took the baby to Community Hospital where about a dozen stitches were taken in head lacerations. The child was fainted and. He is recovering satisfactorily.

The Buckles were hauling a heavy trailer. The accident happened on an outwinding curve of the canyon road, throwing the child clear of the car and trailer.

Accident
Another car accident on the Lookingglass-Reston Road near the old Reston school house occurred in late afternoon Sunday. Bobbie Willis was returning from prune picking in the Johnson orchard when his car and that of M. and Mrs. Elmer Bushnell collided on a turn of the road. The drivers were temporarily blinded by dust raised by a car passing just ahead of them.

Neither car was seriously damaged. The Willis car had to be towed away. Only minor injuries were suffered by the occupants of the car. Mrs. Bushnell was the most seriously injured and was taken to Community Hospital for treatment. She was released the following day.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kirchmeir of Eugene spent Sunday visiting with Mrs. Ben Moody. They called at Community Hospital where Mr. Moody has been confined for a number of weeks receiving treatment following a leg injury suffered over a year ago while engaged in logging operations. The Kirchmeirs and Moodys were

Patrice Munsel, Opera Star, Hits Night Club

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — The Metropolitan Opera's Patrice Munsel hit the night club circuit Monday night with a varied program ranging from sedate arias to sexy torch songs. The shapely soprano, opening a three-week engagement at the Venus Room of the New Frontier Hotel, alternated such items as Cole Porter's "It's All Right With Me," Mine's aria from "La Boheme," by Puccini; Harold Arlen's "A Sleeping Bee" from "House of Flowers"; and the Italian street song from "Naughty Marietta," by Victory Herbert.

Closet Drama Called Most Influential Type Of TV Play

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK — The most influential — and fashionable — type of television play today is something called closet drama. It's concerned with problems of character, usually involves a family, and has overtones of what used to be called social significance. Historically the closet drama was born on the old Television Playhouse when it was presided over by Fred Coe, a calm, literate, 38-year-old native of Alligator, Miss. Coe's sympathetic personality encouraged such writers as "Marty" and other first-rate dramatists. Coe later turned out "Producer's Showcase" (NBC-TV) and "Mr. Peepers." Now he's devoting himself entirely to a new dramatic series starting on NBC-TV tonight: "The Pontiac Playwrights' Hour" will appear on alternate weeks at the same hour as "Armstrong Circle Theater" (9:30 p.m., EST). Does the new series intend to perpetuate closet drama? No, says Coe. He explains closet drama was the stepchild of economic necessity in those Television Playhouse days. Because the show had a low budget and couldn't hope to attract big name stars, Coe placed the greatest emphasis on writing. He insisted that writers be paid more than anyone working on a show. His sense of fair play fostered some of TV's best dramas — and set a new pay level for dramatic writers in the industry. The new series' first program Tuesday is a far cry from the old days of limited budgets. "The Answer," starring Paul Douglas and Nina Foch, is a dramatization of Philip Wylie's fascinating story of an atomic blast. It will be produced live in NBC-TV's huge Brooklyn studio which will permit a lavish theatrical production. A fortnight hence will come Ernest Hemingway's "The Battlers." The third scheduled drama, "The Heart is a Forgotten Hotel" by Arnold Schulman, might fit here at 10 a.m. Oct. 14.

the category of closet drama — but Coe makes clear he is not necessarily discarding that type of play. "This season there are going to be more one-hour TV dramas than in any previous year," says Coe. "An hour program these days has to be awfully good. With competition being what it is there's not much room for mediocre drama — and there's no room for poor drama."
