Orderliness Of Meeting Of GOP Impresses Three

The orderliness of the Republican Central Committee meeting in Roseburg amazed three Canyonville audience members Friday. One asked the group of 100 "surely don't you have problems?" His response was a general chuckle. Paul Malm, Canyonville Bible Academy instructor, noted that he was an Independent who would like to be a Republican "if we have another person of Eisenhower's status." The comment drew a round of applause. Malm and two other Canyonville folk, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Rothman have a proposed candidate in California's Sen. William Knowland. They asked when the committee would start considering other candidates and learned that ruling prevents a county committee from endorsing publicly a candidate before primary time. "Then I guess it's up to us," he concluded.

Nervous diseases are apparently becoming more and more prevalent as time progresses. Among the most common perhaps should be mentioned the neuralgias, neuritis and neurasthenia which are so common today among the thousands who consult their physicians daily. Neuralgia, of which the chief symptom is pain, which comes on suddenly in paroxysms, followed by intervals of freedom from pain. Exposure to cold, dampness, or drafts of air is the most common cause of the attack, but the underlying cause may be usually difficult or impossible to determine, though pressure and local inflammation are in most cases clearly responsible. The nerve trunks become tender at a pressure. In severe cases there is twitching of the muscles of the affected area, with burning and stinging sensations in the skin. The pain is severe, and seem to shoot along the course of the affected nerves. The neuralgic attacks are rarely of both sides at a time and usually continue from a few minutes to a few days, but may come frequently over a period of many months. As time goes on, they tend to become more severe.

Neuritis is an inflammation of a nerve or nerves. The most commonly affected are those in the back of the neck, in the shoulders and upper arms, the intercostal nerves and the static nerves. Local neuritis is usually toxic in origin, being caused by bacterial toxins, metallic poisons, drugs, alcohol, deficiency states, etc. Multiple neuritis which involves many nerves is usually due to some general debilitating disease or toxic condition. Neurasthenia is characterized by irritable weakness and nervous exhaustion. There may be several attacks in a life-time. The usual cause of an attack is excessive nerve strain. Its manifestations vary greatly; but the most common are fatigue or great weariness after slight exertion and inability to perform the usual amount of mental and physical labor. There is a lack of ability to concentrate, mental depression, morbid fears, and anxiety. Pains in various parts of the body, often in the form of tingling of the ears, sleeplessness, and attacks of palpitation and distress about the heart. The symptoms are so many and so varied that it is common for a person suffering from neurasthenia to imagine they are suffering from every disease they may have heard or read of. The symptoms of neurasthenia do not indicate any organic disease as a rule, and restoration to normal health is possible though it may take some time. (Pd. Adv.)

Issues of the 1956 election are: Peace and prosperity, power, farm, integrity in government, finances and negativism of Democrats. He struck repeatedly at what he called the Democratic policy of accomplishing nothing except the tearing apart of the President's program. Wyatt said he was misquoted in an article appearing in the Oct. 19, 1955, issue of Time Magazine which said he had placed Milton Eisenhower at the top of a list of possible candidates in the event the President did not seek office. The state chairman said his comment dealt primarily with hope that the President's health would allow him to run. declarations about freer world trade," he added. "There is still indefensible discrimination between different commodities, and the burdensome surpluses are still burdening us. As a result the program of controls, effective control still remains."

Stevenson termed the farm problem "desperately difficult," however, and he cautioned Democrats against promising it will be wiped out should they be returned to power. "Farmers will trust the Democratic party next time but they will not trust it to perform miracles," he said.

Truman responded vigorously to shouts of "Give 'em hell, Harry" by an enthusiastic crowd of some 2,000 at an Albany, N. Y. rally of Democratic candidates for local office in New York State. Bicycle Riders Warned About Crossing Bridge

Bicycle riders were asked by Police Chief Stan Olson today to stay out of the vehicle traffic lanes on the narrow Oak Avenue Bridge. Recently, the city posted signs at each end of the bridge to stop bike riders from riding on the pedestrian walkway. Reason For O C Counties Action Explained By Hill

The association wants all area mills, including smaller operators in Lane County, to have a chance at the timber in order to speed up removal of it. So the association board met to take an official stand, and decided to urge a waiving of the marketing area regulation for an emergency period. Request for an official stand had been made by BLM to the association's attorney, Frank Sever.

The principle of marketing areas to stabilize industry is correct, the association believes, providing there is more flexibility to take care of existing present-day conditions. The marketing lines can become incorrect over a period of time if mills move out of a certain area and so forth, Hill said. Plan Meets Favor. In other O & C business, the association president said he has received a letter from the regional office of BLM indicating sympathy for Douglas County's request for special use permits on land designated by the government for recreational purposes.
