Senator Morse Will Not Be Issue; Eisenhower Support Candidate Goal, Says Wyatt

By CHUCK GRELL
Staff Writer, News-Review

Sen. Wayne L. Morse (D-Ore) will not be an issue in the 1956 senatorial election in Oregon, the Oregon Republican Central Committee chairman promised here Friday evening.

Wendell Wyatt, an Astoria attorney chosen last summer to lead the GOP into its 1956 campaign, said his party won't be out to "beat Morse, but to elect a Republican man who supports the Eisenhower program."

"There will be no personalities involved," he stated.

Wyatt, at 37 one of the youngest Republican state leaders in the nation, vowed that his party will have "a strong candidate" ready when the November 1956 general election rolls around.

And he intimated that the Republican chosen to oppose Morse or the man the Democratic party nominates will not have been selected in a hot battle in the May primaries. "It isn't desirable to have a hotly contested primary," he asserted.

No Names Offered

Wyatt wouldn't venture the names of any possible GOP candidates. He also was silent on who might run against Rep. Edith Green of the 3rd Congressional District. She's a Democrat.

Should Sen. Morse be a candidate to succeed himself, Wyatt said, a big "long-time" solid Democrat won't support him under any circumstances.

"They hope to find a real Democrat," he said.

He added that "a substantial number of Democrats will support a Republican who will in turn support the Eisenhower program."

No Speculation On Ike

Regarding chances that President Eisenhower might still run, in view of his recent illness, Wyatt said he believes "it's not proper to speculate until there's a medical opinion on whether the President can run."

The Astoria man said he was impressed by the showing of Rep. Sam Coon (R) in his recent debates against Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D) over the partnership proposals for hydroelectric power development in the Pacific Northwest.

Wyatt claimed that "Coon has shown the Democratic program is one of opposition."

Enlarging, he said "the Democrats want all public power or nothing. Support the Democrats, and you get nothing," hinting, perhaps, that resulting opposition would divide Congress to the point where nothing may be accomplished in power development.

Arguments Discredited

He called Democratic arguments on power and other questions "negativism."

"All they're doing is criticizing," he charged. "They can only return to their former programs, which either failed or were rejected."

That "negativism" was one of six issues which Wyatt outlined as being issues to be brought forward by the Republicans in 1956. Others were the private vs. public power question, "peace and prosperity," integrity in government, government finance and the farm program.

Wyatt was interviewed by newspaper and radio people in the Hotel Umpqua, where he stayed the night. He was an hour late in arriving in the city when his plane was held up by weather.

Mose Spent Night In Cemetery After Big Day Of Trial

DETROIT (AP) — Witness Mose Wright of the recent Mississippi murder trial spent the night of the acquittal, he says, hiding in a church cemetery for fear he'd be harmed if he stayed home.

"I thought someone might come to the house and I gotten afraid they would do something to me," he said.

Wright, 64-year-old Negro, made the statement to a reporter in an interview last night.

He was a witness in the trial last month of J. W. Milam and Roy Bryant, two white men accused of murdering 14-year-old Emmett Till, a Chicago Negro. Till was a nephew of Wright and was visiting his uncle in Mississippi when he disappeared last August.

The aftermath of the trial, in which both men were acquitted, has led to a conflict between newspapers in Chicago and Mississippi. Also, the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People picketed the U. S. Customs House in Chicago yesterday in the course of a Senate Internal Security subcommittee hearing there.

The NAACP charges that verdict in the Till case shows that human rights are denied Negroes in Mississippi.

TO APPEAL VERDICT

HEPPNER (AP)—Mrs. Ann Avenet, convicted Aug. 31 of second-degree murder in the killing of Portland attorney Dellmore Lessard, plans an appeal.

Dist. Atty. Bradley Fancher said he had been advised by Circuit Judge William Wells of this, although only a letter from her, rather than the formal papers, have thus far been received.

Coon, Neuberger Conclude Arguments In Final Debate Held At Bend Friday Night

BEND, Ore. (AP)—Republican Rep. Coon and Democratic Sen. Neuberger wound up their series of ten debates here Friday night.

Coon claimed he had proved that his bill for "partnership" construction of John Day Dam was in the public interest. He said Neuberger favors "socializing the electricity industry" and that "he has lost this debate because he has been on the wrong side of the fence."

The Democratic senator, who opposes Coon's bill and favors instead federal construction of the Columbia River power project, closed his argument with a plea that residents of Oregon "stand by our federal power program... that has stood by you."

Neuberger repeated his statement that the bill had been written by Kinsey Robinson, president of the Washington Water Power Co., and that the bill was designed to provide private utilities with excessive profits. Coon again denied this.

Coon coupled his defense of the bill with an attack on Oregon's Democratic congressional delegation. He particularly singled out Sen. Morse for criticism when he said that opposition to his bill by Morse, Neuberger and Rep. Green was "politics at its cheapest."

"If our Oregon senators are going to try to obstruct any dams from Oregon or keep away progress we need from Oregon, I say Wayne Morse is not fit to serve in the U. S. Senate," Coon said.

Coon contended in the debates that his bill provides the quickest way to bring additional power to the Pacific Northwest.

The bill calls for public and private agencies to pay 273 million dollars for power generating features of the 310 million dollar dam. In return, these agencies would receive 50-year contracts for all the power produced by the dam.

"Speeches for free enterprise won't bring industry and payrolls to the Pacific Northwest. Low cost power will," Neuberger said.

His argument throughout the debates in eastern and southern Oregon communities, has been that power under Coon's bill will cost more and that these higher power rates will keep new industry from the region.

A crowd of about 300 yearly there equally.

Neuberger said he regretted that Coon had made a personal attack on Morse, but the senator closed his arguments on a pleasant note. He congratulated Coon for the generally high level on which he said the debate had been maintained.

Coon also said he was pleased with the debate and that he had brought additional information to the ten audiences.
