Queen Elizabeth, Duke To Make African Tour

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh are going to Nigeria on a royal tour of West Africa early next year.

The suddenness of the announcement—never even whispered before—raised speculation Tuesday night that the Queen may be making arrangements to be out of the country in the event Princess Margaret goes ahead with marrying Peter Townsend. Royal tours are usually announced much further ahead of time—sometimes a year ahead.

Buckingham Palace said the Queen would arrive in Nigeria "the last few days of January" and return "towards the middle of February." Nigeria has never been visited by a reigning sovereign.
