Man Starts Stalled Car With Real Loud Bang

LANCASTER, Ohio (AP) — Robert Lewis, 27, of Columbus, started his stalled auto with a real bang!

Lewis, helping Glenn Howes on a farm five miles north of here, apparently lost the keys to his car one day this week, reported Fairfield County sheriff's deputy Milton Speakman.

Deciding to cross wires to get the car started, Lewis went into the Howes garage and picked up a likely looking piece of "wire" and touched it to the ignition wire in the car.

Howes brought Lewis to Lancaster-Fairfield hospital, where the Columbus man was treated for burns on his forearms and legs.

The "wire" Lewis had touched to his ignition was a fuse wire with a dynamite cap on it, Speakman said.
