

Panel Discussion Highlights Meet Of Green PTA

Inclement weather resulted in a small attendance at a Green PTA panel discussion meeting Monday evening.

Allan J. Petersdorf, principal of Green Elementary School was panel moderator for the topic, "What the Community Owes Its Youth and What the Youth Owes the Community."

Father Rattigan of Roseburg emphasized many problems could be solved if parents fully realize what they owe their children and in turn what children owe parents.

Julian Halleck, juvenile officer, stated, "we owe youth adequate homes, modern schools, churches and well staffed agencies to help them youth has the need of such agency."

"Youth represents a tremendous potential that can be guided into a worthy contribution to society," commented the Rev. Kenneth Dooly.

Marvin Fray, student of Roseburg High School reminded youth they owe respect to people and public property.

Bob Bradley, another high school student, felt youth does not realize they owe anything to a community.

"Youth should take advantage of all facilities provided by a community and take a deeper interest in community affairs for we are the leaders of tomorrow."

Mrs. Dole, elementary teacher, brought out the importance of home training at the very young age.

They can learn these as readily as walking and talking. Parents and teachers should support each other efforts in the welfare of their children.

The two parents on the panel, Mrs. Gum and Mr. McLaughlin, both agreed parental love and understanding and good home training contribute to a well-adjusted citizen.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Bishop's and Mrs. Harriott's third grade rooms.
