Supreme Court Test Of Naming Justices Slated

SALEM, Ore. — The Oregon Supreme Court will hear arguments Jan. 23 on a challenge of the state's power to appoint temporary supreme justices.

The challenge was filed by the Portland law firm of Maguire, Shields, Morrison and Bailey.

The high court, acting under a 1955 law, recently appointed three circuit judges as temporary supreme justices to help the high court dispose of its backlog of cases.

The law firm claims the law violates the state constitution, which says judges must be elected, and that there shall be seven justices.

The suit is directed at Circuit Judge James W. Crawford, Portland, the first to be appointed under the law. Since then, Oregon City, and Dal. M. King, Coquille, have been given similar appointments.

The new law was sponsored by the Oregon State Bar, which will appear in the case to support the law.
