Heroic Bus Driver, In Blizzard Trek, Saves Passengers

TUCUMCARI, N.M.—The howling blizzard heaped waist-high drifts of snow and sent temperatures plunging to 10 below. Through it bus driver John Heron, 38, struggled for 8 1/2 hours seeking help.

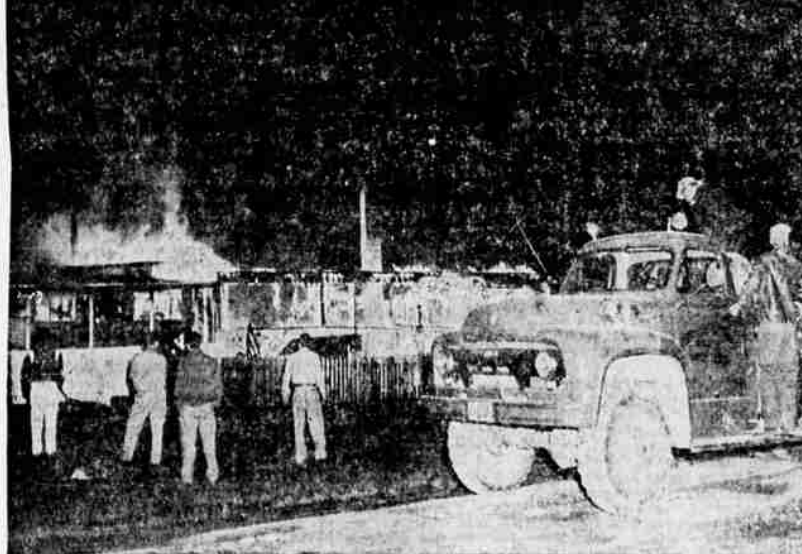

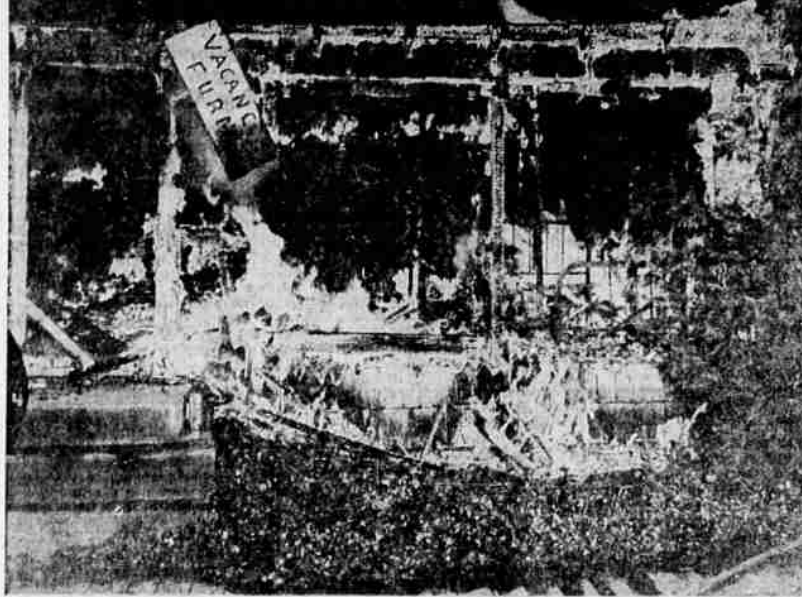

Behind him were the 16 passengers in his bus, many of them praying that he would get through. The bus had slipped from the highway into a drift. For five hours, Heron had waited for help—then he set out.

He collapsed a few yards from a service station at nearby Glenrio, N.M. He had strength enough to whistle and was rescued by men from the station. Help was started on its way to the bus—12 miles away in one of the worst storms in recent years in this state.

Snowplows and tractors broke a path to the bus, taking food and water and fuel to keep the bus heaters going during the night. Early yesterday, after 21 hours of waiting, the passengers were removed, brought to Tucumcari and then set on their way.

Heron is in a Tucumcari hospital recuperating from snowblindness, frostbite and exhaustion. He is reported in good condition.

2-State Blizzard Costs 23 Lives

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The worst appeared over in the five-day blizzard that paralyzed Texas and New Mexico and claimed at least 23 lives.

The storm subsided Sunday night as winds lessened and the snowfall began diminishing.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Chicago said today that the storm front, or what remained of it, seemed to be headed northeastward.

The Texas-New Mexico area "should have a respite" from the storm with above-freezing temperatures bringing about a general thawing-out, the bureau said.

The storm, ranked by Texans as the worst in 50 years and tabbed as the worst ever by New Mexico citizens, made most roads impassable and caused the closing of several schools. Classes in Plainview, Amarillo, and Lubbock were canceled today as the three Texas cities pushed cleanup efforts.

Auto Education Class Scheduled

Roseburg women last fall got the chance to learn about their cars. Now it's the men's turn.

An adult education class will be for 10 weeks, according to Dick Boss, director of adult and vocational education in the Roseburg School District.

The course is a purely theoretical study of automobile function and manufacture, Boss said. There will be no tinkering with engines or driving lessons.

Among other things, students will be advised how to properly care for their cars, how to select a used car and how an engine works—but no mechanics. A minimum of 12 students is needed, Boss said.

The classes will be held each Tuesday, starting this week at 7:30 p.m. Tuition is $5. Interested persons can enroll Tuesday evening at the auto shop at Roseburg High School, Boss said.

Last fall, a similar class for women only was extremely successful. Now the men are being given a chance to learn what the women now know, according to Boss.

U.S. Balloons Evoke Protest From Russia

MOSCOW—Russia charges that U.S. military forces are dispatching fleets of huge balloons carrying automatic cameras and radio equipment over Soviet territory from West Germany and other border nations.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman indicated the Russians apparently were objecting to high-altitude weather balloons the U. S. Air Force announced last month it would send up in Europe in preparation for the International Geophysical Year.

A Soviet note published by the official news agency Tass demanded that the United States immediately stop such activity. It said the balloons were a menace to aircraft.

It demanded a halt also to propaganda-carrying balloons by private U. S. organizations.
