Dillard Man Identified With New Industry Plan

Paul H. Dillard of Dillard is one of two Oregon directors in the organization which plans to re-open part of the idle Doernbecher furniture plant in Portland. The organization is called the Rose City Plywood Corp.
He said the corporation plans a plywood layup and lumber operation at the plant which will employ initially 100 men. These 100 will be shareholders in the new firm.

FORD HOSPITAL AID

BAKER — A $22,800 Ford Foundation grant will be used to replace St. Elizabeth's Hospital floors and stairways with concrete, hospital officials report.
The remodeling is expected to take about three months with doubling up of patients necessary.

Former Roseburg Street Superintendent Reminisces

HE KNOWS STREETS—George Frew thoughtfully contemplates thoughtfully of the good old days in Roseburg. He was street superintendent for 23 years before the present superintendent Guy Meigs. He served under mayors Walter Hamilton, Napoleon Rice, Dr. George Houck, Dr. E. V. Hoover, J. E. McClintock, Charles Clark, A. J. Young, W. F. Harris, Charles Horton and Al Fliegel. Frew is retired now as the result of illness. (Paul Jenkins).

By GEORGE CASTILLO
City Editor, News-Review
"You'd think we never had a street department before 1946," said George Frew.
He was unhappy about what he considered recent intimations in News-Review stories from the street department. He said it appeared in the stories from present street department personnel that Roseburg didn't even have a street department during and before World War II.
Served 18 Mayors
Frew proudly proved the city doubts that Roseburg had both streets and equipment and men to keep them cleaned and repaired long before 1946.

He related that the first streets were paved in 1909. Others followed and by 1925, the city had 30 miles of street paved.
Frew himself came to work for the department on May 15, 1922. George Grimm was then superintendent and Walter Hamilton was mayor.
Three-Man Department
The street department then consisted of three men. They had two teams of horses and a wagon and a horse-drawn street broom. Asphalt for paving was mixed by hand.
The department got its first asphalt plant and street flusher in 1925 under Mayor George Houck, now one of the deans of Oregon physicians who lives in Portland. Frew was appointed superintendent

Oakland Cub Scouts Have Dinner Meet

Cup Scout Pack 29 of Oakland had a dinner and anniversary meeting at the Veterans' Memorial Building recently.
A "mulligan stew" dinner was served by the Cub Scout committee, with Vernon Little and Herbert Parker doing the catering to the 80 Cub Scouts, family members and friends present.
The program which followed was directed by the Cubmaster, Dr. Homer M. Noble, who introduced Edell Bryant, Cubmaster of Pack 4, Edgewater area of Roseburg, who with den mothers from that pack were special guests of the evening.
Eugene W. Todd, scoutmaster of Troop No. 29 of Oakland, was also introduced as the special liaison representative of the American Legion of Oakland and all forms of scouting.
In the pack program, the Bobcat pin was awarded to Ronny Bodine. Two year pins were given to Eddie Todd, Roger Boehrs, and Cyril Longton, and a one year pin was given to Jackie Kessinger.
Each of the four dens of the pack put on a Cub Scout stunt, which was followed by the octopus race, the living circle and the dismissal.
Cub Scout Pack 29 of Oakland now number 38 boys and has run continuously since its origin five years ago.
