Petroleum Prospecting Class Session Subject

Oil, the black gold now being sought in many Northwest areas, will be the hub for discussion in Roseburg Friday.

The weekly adult education class sponsored by the YMCA has been opened to the public. Several films, including "Prospecting for Petroleum," will be shown. The class is held at the YM office, 520 SE Spruce St., starting at 8 p.m.

Roseburg businessman Jack Myers, a graduate geologist from the University of Chicago who was for several years a geologist with several major oil companies, will conduct a discussion period following the film showings.

He has been active in the Drain Chamber of Commerce, was president of the Drain PTA two years, is an official of the Bohemia District of Boy Scouts and is a member of the Douglas County Water Resources Advisory Committee. He also has served as treasurer of the Oregon Wildlife Federation for several years.

He moved to Drain in 1947

Inadequate Financing For Education Conclusion

ual suggestions "very well may be the answers to the future."

He stressed conference agreement on teacher shortage, goals of education, the matter of school building problems and the value of carrying such findings to the public.

A resident of the Roberts Creek District drew chuckles from the audience after he had held up one hand in answer to Dr. Martin's query "Are there any districts here with no building problems?"

Martin sees a change in educational patterns. Today the parent and public are interested in education, he believes; not the school alone.

While everyone is interested in education, a Goliath problem confronts the nation.

Dr. Alva W. Graham, Southern Oregon College professor of education, reviewed the teacher shortage. "We have 20 requests for every graduate," he said. Oregon colleges continue to insist on holding high teacher qualifications, he pointed out, but he notes a "probable dangerous deterioration in the field."

This comes because of insufficient numbers of students in education and a loss of 10 per cent of instructors each year. Meanwhile, enrollment skyrockets, he stressed.

He had no panacea for this "problem not only of recruitment but replacement. He believes a partial solution is: (1) Holding those in the field (making the profession more attractive); (2) Attracting a large share of college graduates; and (3) Acquiring college-educated adults on a temporary qualification basis. Dr. Graham sees need for scholarships, grants and the like to bring more high school students to the teaching field.

The problem of state finance as relative to education was expertly outlined by State Sen Paul Geddes. "I'm afraid I can't wave a wand and produce money," he began, and then told his audience about Oregon's financial fix.

Quickly running through general fund expenditures for 1955-57 as compared to 1945-47, Sen. Geddes showed where the jump from 74 millions to 215 millions had come. Education takes 50 per cent today as compared to 45.3 per cent 10 years ago, and the sum is roughly 107 millions compared to 74 millions. Similar jumps exist in other categories.

Items in general fund expenditures have been voted by the people, he noted: Such items as basic school support fund, welfare assistance, a new mental institution, veterans assistance, law enforcement protection and the like. Such set costs are stationary and can be changed only by voters.

Outside of general fund are monies derived from gasoline taxes and such and earmarked for state highways. If voters approved, the sum could be partially diverted to education. Legislators did not want to boost real property taxes "realizing they were high" and for that reason they approved the 45 per cent sur tax on income, he said, to cover the state budget.

"The budget can't be cut, yet money is needed," he said, but "don't ask for it (educational financial assistance) unless you expect to pay for it." He noted that a sales tax would have to be approved by the people. Meanwhile, the Oregon income tax is already the highest in the nation.

Meeting Chairman Arthur Marsh, Lookingglass, reported to the group concerning the "true picture" of the tax dollar spent in Douglas County. He said citizens had asked county school Supt. Kenneth E. Barneburg for the financial outline and learned that the 1955-56 budget dollar of the county was divided thusly: Schools — 54 cents; roads — 32 cents; cities — 11 1/2 cents; court districts (water, rural fire, etc.) — 2 1/2 cents. Marsh said slips in tax notices had read that 80 per cent of the dollar went for schools and that had caused the citizens to make the request.

Salmon Harbor Views Are Aired At Public Hearing

Conducted by Col. Jackson Graham, district engineer of the U.S. Corps of Engineers, Portland, a public hearing in Reedsport Wednesday, aired the views of a large number of persons and interests, about Salmon Harbor improvements.

Urging federal appropriations of more than half a million dollars for the continuation of the Winchester Bay harbor development, in a five-step series of proposed improvements, construction totaling $334,900 in costs was advocated by the sponsors of the existing Salmon Harbor, the Port of Umpqua district, and Douglas County.

The presentation was made in the form of a brief prepared by engineers Cornell, Howland, Hayes and Merryfield of Corvallis. It was supported by a large number of commercial and recreational fishing interests, civic and mercantile bodies and others.

Attending from Roseburg were Charles Collins, Douglas County Parks Dept. supervisor, and members of the county court, Judge Carl Hill and Commissioner Frank Ashley.

specific starting and completion dates. Collins said.

Roach said he had not seen Thornton's written opinion, but added, "It has always been the policy of Idaho Power to comply with all pertinent Idaho and Oregon statutes to such extent as may be possible without conflict or inconsistency with its rights and duties under its FPC license. In keeping with that policy the company has application on file with the Oregon Hydroelectric Commission, and a public hearing by that body was held in Baker, Ore., on Jan. 20."

Thornton said Idaho Power submitted to Oregon jurisdiction in that application, but did not wait for a license before starting construction. The Hydroelectric Commission has not yet announced its decision on whether to grant a license.

In that hearing attorney C. Girard Davidson, representing groups opposed to Idaho Power, called for the attorney general to prosecute the power firm for starting construction without an Oregon license.

Davidson, also a Democrat, is a former undersecretary of the Department of Interior, and is a candidate for Oregon Democratic national committeeman.

Portland General Electric officials withheld comment. They said they wanted to study Thornton's opinion first.

The state Hydroelectric Commission, and the state Fish and Game commissions opposed PGE's application, but the company won an FPC license. The state challenged in court and won in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals at San Francisco. The Supreme Court, however, in a 4-1 decision, ruled against the state.

Overturning Appeals Court decision has aroused widespread opposition in Western states. Some congressmen are proposing a law to assure states clear-cut jurisdiction over waters within their boundaries.

Thornton directed the district attorneys of Jefferson County, where the Pelton project is located, and Baker County, where the Hells Canyon and Brownlee projects are located, to determine if construction has started.

If so, prosecution should follow, Thornton said. The possible penalty is a $1,000 fine or six months in jail or both.

4-Point Program Given For Living By Speaker

impression where "individuality" is recognized will keep one from "wanting what others have" and "bring about an acceptance of our individual natures."

The speaker observed on point three that living one day at a time can cultivate perspective. And that cultivating perspective "brings all the compartmentalized things together and brings them on a higher level."

Fourthly, he instructed that "we must come to the place where we realize that you and I are spiritual in nature, that you and I are part of a spiritual universe."

He cited the purpose of a human being's existence as the realization of the spiritual part of his nature. He said that every human is inherently drawn to his Creator.

"When we come to the recognition of our own being, that the purpose of our existence is the realization of the spiritual part of our nature, then we do not want to be anybody else."

"We begin to realize in a very fundamental way that it is great to live with someone as great as ourselves."

Moose Governor Will Initiate 100 Candidates Here

GEORGE YOUNG . . . to initiate 100

The supreme junior governor of the Loyal Order of Moose will conduct the initiation of 100 candidates into Roseburg Lodge 1037.

He is George W. Young, Spokane, Wash., who will make his initial Roseburg visit Saturday. The initiation will be held at the new Moose Hall, 1222 SE Stephens St., starting at 8 p.m.

A Moose member for more than three decades, the attorney first joined the fraternity while studying for his degree at Gonzaga University. He later became governor of the Spokane Moose Lodge 161.

Next, he advanced to become noble north Moose of the Legion of the Moose, the lodge's second degree; president of the Northwest Moose Assn.; president of the Washington State Moose Assn. and Justice of the Moose supreme forum.

He has been awarded the fraternity's highest degree, the Pillgrim Degree of Merit. Young is married. His two grown sons are following in his footsteps. Both are active in the Moose.

2 Persons Hurt In 2-Car Crash

Two people were injured, but not seriously enough to be hospitalized, in a two-car accident Thursday on Highway 99 between Myrtle Creek and Canyonville, state police said.

Receiving bad bruises were Edna Connor of Vancouver, Wash., and William S. Deal of Salem. Mrs. Connor's husband, John J., was cited for following another car too close.

Officers said his vehicle struck the rear of one driven by Billy Lee Parker of Myrtle Creek, as Parker started to make a left turn. Both cars were headed north.

Passengers in the car driven by Parker, William and Nina Faye Glampe of Myrtle Creek, also escaped injury.

Other passengers in the Connor car were Myra A. Deal of Salem, John R. and Joan Price of Silverton and their 22-month-old daughter, Lois. They were not hurt.

Eisenhower Presses Bid For Second Term

the duties of his office in the light of his Sept. 24 heart attack. Their general attitude was that Eisenhower himself had raised the issue by discussing his health in his broadcast Wednesday night.

Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, one of those figuring in speculation about the possible Democratic nominee, said the President's health certainly would be a campaign issue—that Eisenhower "has made it a major issue."

The possible GOP Vice Presidential Nominee—GOP chairman Hall predicted will again be Eisenhower's running mate.

There has been recurrent talk that some elements in the Republican Party want to "jettison" Nixon.

The GOP Convention—Eisenhower signed statements permitting his name to be entered in the presidential primaries to be held in Wisconsin and California on April 3 and June 5, respectively. Laws of these two states require a candidate's written consent. Eisenhower's name already has been entered in half a dozen other states where no such consent is required. By all the signs, the delegate-pledging convention, to be held in San Francisco beginning Aug. 20, will be solidly Eisenhower.

Hall was talking to a news conference when he predicted Nixon will be the party's vice presidential nominee. Hall has favored Nixon all along.

On the question of Eisenhower's name as a campaign issue, the GOP chairman said any "whispering campaign" is going to fail because "the American people know the President has insisted that every fact about his health be made known as quickly as it is determined by the medical authorities."

Hall said the Republicans considered in the 1944 campaign whether to make the late President Roosevelt's health an issue. He said they decided that the American sense of plain decency would not permit it, "and, to put it in the bluntest terms possible, would cost us votes instead of gaining them."

Hall said the President is entitled to Republican working majorities in the Senate and House and promised a "real organized effort" to obtain this goal.

Asked how the Republicans could capture the Senate, now controlled by the Democrats by a single vote, Hall said the GOP will win Democratic seats in New York and Oregon. He said the Republicans also will hold their Connecticut seat.

Glendale Telephone Service Disrupted Worse Than In Dec.

Telephone communications were more severely damaged in the Glendale area during last week's snowstorm than in the similar snows of January, according to correspondent Mrs. G. B. Fox.

A report of damage today revealed that most of it was limited to the section between Canyon Pass south of Canyonville to Wolf Creek. North and south of this section, warmer temperatures resulted in rain instead of snow.

The soggy weight of the snow was reflected in a reading taken at the county weighing scale near Glendale. It showed the weight of snow amounted to eight pounds per square foot, Mrs. Fox said.

Mrs. Fox reports that at present, the Glendale Telephone Co. crews are concentrating on removing traffic hazards from downed lines. She said some sections outside of Glendale found lines so broken and tangled that entire sections will have to be completely restrung.

She reports about half the lines inside Glendale are operative. The larger mills were back on service this week. Several smaller ones were not. The grade and high schools were both without service for nine days but have been restored.

In Azalea, only four phones are now operating, including those of the three business houses there. One or two phones are operating at Wolf Creek in Josephine County.

Mrs. Vera Kemp, office manager of the company, said she was anxious to tell the county service had not been fully restored. She asked that persons wishing to call the damaged area check with a Roseburg operator, who has a list of phones now in operation. She may be able to reroute important calls if necessary.

The representative also points out that he has worked with considerable success for appropriation for the Willamette Valley flood control project, the construction of Bonneville transmission lines, forest access roads and rural electrification expansion.

Ellsworth has served in Congress long enough to have high seniority rating. He is third ranking member of the House Rules Committee which nationally known writers have declared the most powerful committee in Congress.

Veteran observers on Capitol Hill say Cong. Ellsworth has won a very high place for himself in the House and is liked and respected by members on both sides of the aisle.

Contracts Offered At Myrtle Creek

The Myrtle Creek school board Wednesday night offered contracts to personnel, who had been recommended by the district administration, reports correspondent Ruth M. Evans.

Mrs. Evans said, however, that a few teachers have indicated they will leave the district this year.

The board also granted approval to a request by Hal Lohbeck, Tri-City Grade School principal, to attend the Northwest elementary principals meeting at Spokane in the first week of April. Lohbeck is president of the western Oregon Elementary Principals Assn.
