

No Campaign Pressure On Auto Agents, Ford Says

WASHINGTON (AP)—Henry Ford II said Monday his father, Ford Motor Co. president, had no campaign pressure on auto agents, Ford said.

But he insisted, in testimony prepared for a Senate Commerce subcommittee, that no pressure was put on the dealers, no company funds were used, and no other company personnel were involved.

Ford said that under those conditions, he approved in advance the solicitation efforts of his assistant, Allen W. Merrill, who at the time was a member of the Republican National Finance Committee.

Ford said he never learned which dealers did or did not contribute, though he understands that many did and that the total amount was substantial.

"I also know," he added, "that a large group of our dealers are staunch Democrats and I have heard that they contributed generously to the campaign of Democratic candidates."

Ford said the Ford Motor Co., as such, would not support the political candidacy of any person, financially or otherwise.

"But what any employee of the company does in his own behalf and acting as a private citizen," Ford added, "is another matter and one of his own concern."

Different Story Told

Milton Ratner, a Chicago Ford dealer who lost his franchise last year, told the subcommittee Feb. 23 another dealer asked asked him to give $1,000 to the Eisenhower campaign. He said he was told "the office of Henry Ford" wanted $50,000 for the purpose from Chicago dealers.

Ratner said he did not contribute, but "as far as I know," he was one of only two dealers in the city who did not.

The subcommittee, headed by Sen. Monroney (D-Okla.), is investigating automobile marketing practices and it was with that subject that most of Ford's testimony dealt.

"We have continually led our industry," he testified, "in the development of policies and programs designed to create and maintain a healthy dealer structure."

The company works closely with its dealers and depends on them, he said, relating that the Ford division alone paid $1,200,000 last year to keep close check on dealers and help improve the business practices of those whose profit it was too small.
