

Ike's Foreign Aid Request Assailed By Sen. Knowland

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's request for $4,859,975,000 for foreign aid, with authority to make 10-year commitments, bumped into immediate opposition to the long-term plan Monday from his own party leader in the Senate, Sen. Knowland of California.

Knowland, who differs from the administration frequently on foreign policy, also strongly intimated that he questions the justification for so much money, and argued for a shift in general aid policy as well.

Knowland's formal statement said Congress "will adequately support the continuation of the mutual aid program to those nations doing their utmost to help themselves."

The Californian, however, added: "Except as to specific public works projects that may be presented to and approved by Congress, I do not look with favor upon commitments for 10 years or other long periods for foreign economic aid."

With respect to the program in general, Knowland commented: "Our budget is not yet balanced. Our national debt is over 280 billion dollars. Our individual citizens and our free enterprise system are carrying heavy tax burdens."

"For the economic development of countries in need of capital funds for new or enlarged industrial plants, they should look primarily to private investment rather than to government grants and loans. These countries should create an economic climate that would attract rather than repel such investment."

WHAT'S HE FIGHTING?—Leonard Wilson, 19-year-old pro-segregation student leader at the University of Alabama, talks to reporters at Birmingham after the university expelled him for taking part in campus riots against Negro coed Autherine Lucy. "I have just begun to fight," said Wilson.

TAXES—In 1929, only 3 per cent of our personal income faded into taxes. But by this year, that chunk had grown to 11.1 per cent. There's been little change in other major expenditures, except services. That category takes somewhat smaller percentage of our personal income now. Personal income is income from all sources. Durables include permanent items, such as furniture and cars. Data from the Conference Board.
