O'Reilly, Montana To Tangle Tonight

One of the hottest grudge battles now raging in the Northwest will explode at the local armory tonight when Irish Jack O'Reilly tangles with the rough and rugged Bull Montana.

Both men throw the rule books out the window when they enter the ring and should provide plenty of excitement.

Bull Montana is one of the roughest grapplers to ever appear in the northwest and has lost but few matches since coming here three months ago.

O'Reilly, on the other hand, is no rookie in the game, either, as he has victories over some of the toughest and plans on giving the Bull all that he wants.

Montana specializes in the deadly pile-driver hold with an occasional atomic drop kick.

O'Reilly is the aggressive type wrestler and combines an excellent knowledge of leverage holds with a rough and rugged attack.

Herbie Freeman will meet tough Tommy Phelps in the semi-final. Freeman made a sensational debut last week against Cal Roberts and will try to welcome the tough Phelps in the same fashion.

Phelps hails from Dallas, Tex., where they are used to the rough and tough style wrestling and he plans on giving the youthful Freeman a good sample of some.

Matches will get under way at 8:30.

They were cut from the roster to make room for outfielder Tom Saffell, purchased earlier this week through the Brooklyn Dodgers.
