

Finale Of Korean Armistice Farce Slated In Abolition Of Last 'Inspection' Team

By JAMES MARLOW
AP NEWS ANALYST

WASHINGTON (AP)—It is almost like a small footnote on the dismal story of Korea when the United States suggests abandoning as useless the truce teams set up to see that neither side cheats on the armistice.

The United States has long complained that the Reds in North Korea have violated the armistice by building up their forces and not letting the truce teams get around enough to check up.

The armistice was signed July 27, 1953, after three years and 32 days of fighting and two years and 17 days of talking about an armistice. There is still an armistice. But there is no real peace.

No peace talks ever have been held.

The armistice provided for calling a conference—within 90 days after the signing of the truce—to work out the "peaceful settlement of the Korean question, etc."

That "etc." was a beaut. It could mean anything or everything. No one ever got to the point of finding out what there was no peace conference. There were only conferences to arrange a conference and they broke up.

"Neutral" Teams Farcial
Both sides agreed in the armislice neither should build up its forces or add to its supply of weapons. To provide a check, both sides agreed they should be open to inspection.

So they created inspection teams—called the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission—made up of men from Sweden, Switzerland, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

The Poles and Czechs, being Russian satellites, could hardly be called neutral. So the commission was suspect from the start. The commission became an 80-man group divided into 20 inspection teams stationed in North and South Korea.

By last summer, after 23 Polish and Czech inspectors stationed in South Korea were accused of spying for the Reds, the 80 man commission was cut in half. It was cut more later. Now there are only six inspection teams left.

The West complained the Swiss and Swede inspectors were not permitted to carry out their job by covering enough territory in North Korea.

Last week Robert Murphy, deputy undersecretary of state, called representatives of this country's 16 allies in the Korean War into conference and said steps should be taken to abolish the inspection teams.

Winston Residents Recall First Shipment Of Local Strawberries

By MRS. TED PETERSON

An article appearing in the earlier days column of the Oregon Journal dated 50 years ago revealed that on April 30, 1906, the first shipment of strawberries was received from Dillard in Douglas County. It consisted of a single crate and sold for $10.80, or 45 cents a box.
