France Orders Troops To Rebelious Algeria

PARIS (U) — France was reported reliably Wednesday to have ordered 30,000 more troops sent to rebellious Algeria before the end of the month to help fight the spreading nationalist revolt.

Responsible informants said 20,000 men would be dispatched immediately to the seething North African territory, the remaining 30,000 going over within the next three weeks.

France's resident minister in Algeria, Robert Lacoste, flew into Paris early Wednesday and gave Premier Guy Mollet's Cabinet a report on the worsening situation in the territory.

France already has more than 300,000 troops battling the rebels in Algeria.
