Jet Fighter Pilots Relate Ordeal Of Collision In Air

SIoux CITY, Iowa, (AP)—Two jet fighter pilots sat on their hospital beds at the Air Force base here Friday night and told what it felt like to emerge alive from a plane collision at 31,000 feet.

First Lt. Francis P. Bennett, Jr., 24 of Alliance, O. and 2nd Lt. Kenneth W. Gero, 21, of Lynden Center, Vt. said that when two jet interceptors crash in the air

Boat Launching Places On Streams Authorized

PORTLAND (AP)—Boat launching facilities on three Oregon streams were authorized Friday by the state Game Commission.

Expenditure of $2,600 was approved for an access road and a cement ramp for boat launching on a tract of land, bordering the Siuslaw River.

Two $1,500 projects, including parking facilities and launching ramps, were authorized at Schroeder Park and Upper Ferry Park on the Rogue River in Josephine County.

Interruptible Power Service To NW Halted

PORTLAND (AP)—Interruptible power service to four Pacific Northwest plants was halted for an hour Friday as peak loads taxed the Bonneville Administration pool.

A Bonneville spokesman said the cut was caused by cool weather, which resulted in increased use of electricity, and reduced generation due to the lowering of storage reservoirs. The reservoirs were lowered to increase flood control storage.

Another brief cutback in peak hour interruptible deliveries is expected Monday if river flows remain high and cool weather continues, a BPA spokesman said.

it is seldom that both pilots escape.

The fact that they survived and were little the worse off for their experience was, they commented, a "lucky break."

Bennett and Gero were simulating a beam attack in the air above the northeastern Nebraska town of Hubbard Friday. Bennett's plane was making a pass at Gero's craft, approaching the line of flight at a right angle.

Then, the pilots related, both suddenly realized a crash was imminent. Each tried to avoid it by

DOG TOO FRIENDLY

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—Ginger, a friendly dog, wagged her tail as she walked by a washing machine. That's when she found out a dog can be too friendly.

Mrs. Ruby David, Ginger's owner, called firemen, who rescued Ginger by cutting the drive belt that had seized her tail.

posing down his plane but the tail assemblies collided. The pilots stayed with their planes for a few seconds, then yanked on the ejection seat levers.

"Immediately after the crash I was upside down with my head against the top of the canopy and I decided to get out," Bennett recalled.

"I lost consciousness when I was shot out and when I came to I was pin-wheeling. I managed to stop myself in the prescribed way. Then I began falling—head down, body slanted—until my parachute opened."

"I saw a piece of wreckage float by. I thought it must be Ken, still unconscious in his seat."

Gero said he too lost consciousness after pulling the lever but came to in a few seconds.

"I was spinning around on my back, looking up into scattered pieces of airplane," he said. "Then I went into a free fall. It felt like a week before that parachute opened."

Bennett lost his helmet and wrist watch, suffered a gash over his right eye and a vertebrae injury. The planes fell five miles apart.
