Only Cows And Parachute Jumper Himself Are Calm When 'Pop' Hits The Silk

SNOHOMISH, Wash. (AP)—Snohomish Valley cows and Howard Whittier are just about the only calm ones around when the seaman decides to make another parachute jump.

Even the cows get edgy on occasion.

Whittier, "Pop" to other members of the Olympic Parachute Club, is 68 years young.

But a little matter of age, Pop insists, isn't going to keep him from hitting the silk now and then, when he has a yen to.

After all, the master-at-arms aboard the Navy transport Gen. Freeman says, he has been at this thing since the early 1930s.

Whittier claims to be one of the earliest-licensed parachute riggers in the business.

When the Freeman is berthed at Seattle, between trips to the Far East, Whittier joins other members of the club, weather permitting, at the Snohomish City Airport for their favorite sport, 'chuting.

The club, composed about half and half bachelors and married men, regards the hobby as strictly a safe and sane sport.

The members admit it's not for the faint-hearted, but they contend, with no objections from the sidelines, that it is a thrilling pastime.

Army airborne training during World War II provided some of the club members with their first taste of parachuting. Others picked up the liking here and there and several, like club president Lyle Hoffman, first leaped into the air with the famed fire-fighting Smoke Jumpers.

Hoffman, 28, is one of the top jumpers in the country. He now is training in New Jersey with the six-man American team which will compete in the international parachuting championships in Moscow next month.

Eventually the club plans to put the experience of its members to work by forming a para-rescue team, if they can accumulate enough money in the club treasury to buy the necessary equipment.

With the formation of a para-rescue unit in mind, the club members now are taking training in basic first aid from Dr. Thomas Johnson of Bremerton, who jumped with the Army during World War II.

The club members "chip in" money to pay the gasoline bills for the airplanes from which they leap into space. The planes usually are of the small, two-seat variety, with one door taken off for the convenience of jumpers making an exit.

Each jump made by a member of the club is cleared officially by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and CAA regulations governing free fall jumps are adhered to very closely.

The jumpers take no chances. They jump only when visibility and wind conditions are right. Most of the members own and repack their own chutes.

Being dependent on their own skill, the airborne troop joke during the war that "if that 'chute doesn't open bring it back and we'll give you another one" draws a deep, dead silence.

Whittier, needless to say, is the oldest member of the club. The youngest is 20-year-old Lorne House, club secretary-treasurer.

The newest member of the club is Harry Spaulding a psychology student at the University of Washington, who summed up the thoughts of the club members when, after completing his first jump, he said:

"It's great. It's like the thrill skiers get from 'schussing a long, steep hill."

Alcatraz Urged For Long-Time, Hardened Inmates

TACOMA (AP) — State Sen. Neil J. Hoff of Tacoma, chairman of the Legislative Council's subcommittee on institutions, proposed Tuesday that "the hard-core, long-time losers" at the Walla Walla State Penitentiary be transferred to Alcatraz.

Hoff said he will propose the plan, similar to Oregon's, when his committee meets next month at Walla Walla. Under the plan, the state of Washington would be permitted to contract with the federal government to take care of what Hoff termed the "hardened, escape-prone, dangerous criminals at the State Penitentiary.

"No program of rehabilitation and work at the prison will be effective unless these hard-core, long-time losers are removed from Washington State Penitentiary where they are constantly stirring up trouble," Hoff said.

"We hoped to work out an arrangement with Idaho and Oregon whereby a three-state maximum security institution could be built for just these men. But the tremendous need in all categories of our institutions program in the areas of our juveniles and mental patients is such that we cannot divert money to build an institution to house our toughest criminals."

Hoff said that Oregon officials report their arrangement with the federal government of shifting the tough convicts to Alcatraz "has effectively handled this program for them." The Oregon law was passed at its last legislative session.

Czech Newspaper Wants To Print News Hereafter

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—A Czech newspaper has informed its readers that Czech newspapers aren't newspapers at all — just propaganda sheets. And the paper, Pravda of Pilsen, thinks they had better start printing some news.

An issue received recently in Vienna observed that since 1948, when the Communists took over Czechoslovakia, much had been heard about the weapon of the press. But:

"Our newspapers ceased to be newspapers. . . They concentrated on long 'fundamental' articles of propaganda but wouldn't tell us what happened in our neighboring community. So we got the news by whispering propaganda. . .

"Naturally our journalists also made the mistake of aping the Soviets uncritically. We copied Soviet papers mechanically. That was no advancement for us. Now we must give our papers a national character. And we must cease to put a pretty front on things. We must realize that our press kept secret even things that the sparrows chirped from the rooftops. . .

"Last year, for instance, we had a big flood—a flood that even inundated the offices of our own paper, the Pilsen Pravda. But there was not a single line about this flood in the papers, including our own. . .

"We journalists are guilty. Henceforth we should have a new slogan—no more dull newspapers. Let's print news."
