Oregonian Sued By Clyde Crosby, Teamster Head

PORTLAND (AP)—Clyde C. Crosby, head of the Teamsters Union in Oregon, Tuesday sued The Oregonian, two of its reporters, and James B. Elkins for $300,000.

Crosby said he was libeled by articles printed by The Oregonian, and written by Wallace Turner and William Lambert, the reporters named as defendants. He said Elkins supplied the information for the articles. The Oregonian identified Elkins as financial backer for after-hours establishments who supplied it with tape recordings.

The Oregonian articles touched off a grand jury investigation here in which Gov. Elmo Smith removed Dist. Atty. William Langley from control and replaced him with Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton.

Crosby's complaint repeats the first article with its headline: "City, county control sought by gamblers; top Teamster seeks police chief ouster."

Crosby said The Oregonian had accused him of meeting with the plotters and of moving into politics and trying to get the police chief replaced.

These "false and libelous statements," Crosby said, were maliciously aired to bring him into "scandal, infamy and disgrace."

He asked a jury hearing of his complaint which lists four causes of action and says he wants from the defendants "and each of them" $50,000 general and $100,000 punitive damages. Crosby's attorney, Clifford D. O'Brien, said this means a total of $200,000 general and $100,000 punitive and not that sum on each of four causes.

The grand jury Tuesday called Police Chief Jim Purcell as a witness. Mayor Fred L. Peterson was listed as on call for later in the day.

Glendale Rebekah's Attend State Assembly

Three Glendale Rebekah members were delegates to the Rebekah Assembly of Oregon in Tillamook. These three, Mrs. Mae Bascom, Mrs. Mable Winkelman and Mrs. Viola Caraway, received decorations of chivalry which were presented by the Patriarchs Militant and their auxiliary.

During the meeting, a request was made by the president of the Douglas Assembly that the Rebekahs of the state sponsor the visit to Oregon of a Rebekah member from the Netherlands, who would conduct about 20 meetings over the state. The Odd Fellows Lodge requested that members and their friends contribute to the Odd Fellows' Blood Bank.

The new state president, Mrs. Ethel Gibbs of Ocean Lake, announced that she will be in Glendale July 19 for the district convention.
