Oregon Governor Plans Jet Flight

SALEM (AP) — Oregon's flying governor is going to add a jet fighter ride to his aerial experience, thanks to the combined efforts of the Army and the Air Force.

Gov. Elmo Smith, who gave up flying his own plane when he succeeded to the governorship this year, will make the jet flight en route to review troops of the 104th Infantry Division at Yakima Training Center in August.

The governor will be piloted on his first jet flight by Col. George F. Ceuleers, Portland Air Base commander, in a jet fighter of the 37th Air Fighter Squadron. He will be met at Yakima by Maj. Gen. Lamar Toose, commander of the Oregon-Washington Army Reserve Division.

Troops of the 104th will be at the center at that time for their annual two weeks of summer field training.
