Branch Agricultural Station Has New Head

CORVALLIS (AP) — James A. B. McArthur will become superintendent of the Eastern Oregon branch of the agricultural experiment station in October, Oregon State College officials said Wednesday.

He will succeed H. G. Avery, former Union County agricultural agent who has been superintendent of the branch since 1945. The branch, located at Union, is a livestock experiment station.

McArthur has been in charge of livestock research at a range experiment station at Manyberries in Alberta, Canada.

Avery will reach retirement age next June. He will spend the time before retirement in writing summary reports on research he has directed.

Talks Begin In Effort To Prevent Air Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Mediation Board began talks Thursday with representatives of the West Coast Airlines and the Air Line Pilots Assn. (ALPA) in an attempt to stave off a threatened strike.

Issues in the dispute include a retirement plan and a demand for a $40 a month wage increase. West Coast pilots receive $1,031 monthly compared to $1,075 paid by most other local service lines in the area.

West Coast airlines serves 43 cities in Washington, Oregon and Idaho. Sixty-five pilots are involved in the dispute.
