

Young Doctor, Armed With Penicillin, Disney Films, To Fight Reds In Laos

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A young St. Louis doctor armed with three Walt Disney films and a lot of penicillin leaves by plane Tuesday for a personal fight against communism in Laos, an Indochina monarchy within marching distance of Communist troops.

Dr. Thomas A. Dooley, 29, plans to spend a year in Laos treating the sick and showing at "the grass root level of diplomacy" the Disney films "Bambi," "Fantasia" and "Snow White." Dooley spent a year in Indochina as a Navy medical officer in 1954-1955 assisting Vietnamese in flight from the Communist regime in northern Indochina. He wrote a book about his experience, "Deliver Us from Evil."

With Dooley are three former Navy corpsmen who worked with him at Haiphong, the evacuation port in Indochina in 1954. They are Norman Baker, of Berlin, VI.,

Peter Kessey of Port Arthur, Tex., and Dennis Shepard of Salem, Ore. Dooley will pay the corpsmen $500 a month each from his own pocket, sources of much of the trip's expense. Their supplies — two jeeps, rations, trailers, camping equipment and $250,000 worth of medical and surgical goods — were donated by private concerns.

"Biggest tools" in the project, said Dooley, are the Disney films, which have been equipped with sound tracks in the Tonkinese dialect of Laos. "Although Laos is nominally a constitutional monarchy," Dooley said, "it is thoroughly infiltrated with Communists whose aim is to get the people to distrust America."
