When this is completed, there will be 600 beds added for chronic and convalescent patients, and 480 beds for aged patients.

Court Throws Out Suit Of Alienating Affections — SALEM — The Oregon Supreme Court threw out of court Tuesday a $10,000 verdict that a Portland woman had been awarded against her mother-in-law for alienation of affections.

The woman, Agnes Ann Anderson, had charged that she lost her husband's affections because of actions by his mother. The couple later was divorced.

The high court, in its decision by Justice William C. Perry, said that when a parent is being sued for alienation of affections, it must be proved that the parent acted wilfully or maliciously. Such was not proved, the court said.

The court also said there was no proof that the mother-in-law, Oveda Sturm, actually caused loss of affections of her son for Mrs. Anderson.

The decision reversed Circuit Judge James R. Bain of Portland.

State Hospital To Be Built For 3,000 Patients

SALEM — The new state hospital to be constructed at Wilsonville ultimately will contain 3,000 patients, the Oregon Board of Control predicted Tuesday.

The hospital now is being planned for 1,500 beds at a cost of more than 15 million dollars, but the buildings will be located so that its size could be doubled.

Rollin Boles, Portland architect, told the board he would complete preliminary plans for the first 400-bed unit by Jan. 1. This unit will cost about seven millions. The 1959 Legislature will be asked to provide funds to complete the 1,500-bed hospital.

The first unit of 400 beds will be started next summer. It will contain an administration building, outpatient clinic, receiving unit of 70 beds, intensive treatment unit for 100 patients, medical section for 100 patients, dental unit of 50 beds, surgical unit with 90 beds, chronic convalescent unit with 90 beds, dietary facilities and heating plant.
