

GILBERT'S 'What Young People Think'Campus Parties? They're Not So Wild, Says Present Crop Of College Students

By EUGENE GILBERT

Wild parties on college campuses? Maybe in the days of the raccoon coat and the Stetson hat, but not today. Not much, anyway.

Seven out of ten collegians we interviewed at ten representative schools across the country said they never heard of such groups as at their school — or else that the frisks they knew of were tame.

A junior at Northwestern summed it up: "That sort of stuff went out with the twenties. We have our fun, but not that kind. There are enough other ways to get kicks."

Typical apparently is one of them. Our survey, conducted with students aged 17 to 22, showed this to be a rapidly popular pastime behind the wry-smile walls.

Reports Exaggerated

But the local tales of love on the campus that crop up occasionally are not necessarily true, our survey is guaranteed anonymously for responses to personal questions by having them mail their unguessed answers directly to our office. About one out of those college students said they'd heard about rather rough parties that included sex relations. This doesn't mean these students took part in them.

A New York road commented: "Whenever exams are over and tension is relieved, there are a few such wild parties. I've been to several. As long as the affair doesn't get so far out of hand, it can be fun. But when that does, it's dangerous."

At places where wild parties do happen, 26 per cent of the boys and 21 per cent of the girls who admit having attended some say heavy drinking and promiscuous petting is often the rule. Sexual intimacy is mentioned by 8 per cent of the boys and 4 per cent of the girls in this group.

Petting Not Universal

An Ohio senior observed blandly, "Since I've taken part in these parties, But it doesn't thrill me like it used to as a freshman. Man, those were the days!"

While on the subject of sex, it should be noted that 80 per cent of the girl students say they never indulge in petting, and three out of four girls say they have never "gone the limit." Forty-four per cent of the boys replied they haven't, either.

But seeing mates in other people's eyes is a different matter. So 82 per cent of the boys felt most of their friends were "excessively active in sex relationships," and 42 per cent of the girls considered most of their friends equally promiscuous. Also 42 per cent of the boys thought the majority of their friends break the much-compared-with 25 per cent of the girls holding similar views.

A 19-year-old college boy said he thought any girl going to campus out of her mind is about as smart as I've never seen it fail for want to get around, making it very tough for the kid."

And a 21-year-old said, "I believe we-boys should be encouraged if it comes to sexual relationships. Women don't benefit in any way and taking advantage of something as wonderful as conception is no big danger though."

Drinking More Universal

Another girl said kissing might easily become too much of a good thing. In dating, several follows, she remarked, "I can't see kissing them all the night and night after the heat. For the first time, only one out of five college girls never drink beer. Four out of ten say they drink it frequently. And only one out of eight boys never touch whisky, while four out of ten do.

PANTY RAIDS — this one was at a sorority house in the state of Washington — are a phenomenon of the decade, but students say really wild parties are rare.

Half of the girls, though, stay away from hard liquor.

Cut Off Point

A Miami, Fla., freshman says, "One of the most enjoyable things I've found about college life is beer drinking. That's the fraternal spirit."

But college students feel that alcohol poses no problem, that it's generally kept under control. "I personally don't drink," a California girl said. "But everyone else seems to. And why shouldn't they, as long as they conduct themselves all right? There hasn't been much trouble with that on my campus in years."

A minority view was expressed from another crew:

"I've broken up with two girlfriends in a year just because they liked liquor a little too much for my taste," she said. "There are plenty of grand guys who are willing to spend their time and money on me rather than on a bachelorette."

SEVENTY PER CENT of students interviewed say extracurricular campus fun today is home, whatever it may have been in the storied past.

Highway Commission Plans Major East Oregon Jobs

SALEM — The Oregon Highway Commission announced plans Tuesday for spending $44,340,000 in Central and Eastern Oregon. Of that amount, $30,742,000 will be spent on already-announced projects on the Columbia River-Oregon Trail Highway.

The two major projects involve grading and paving 13.1 miles of the Waldo Lake Highway between Fossil and Service Creek, at a cost of $10,000,000; and grading and paving sections of the Cen-

State Youth Board Is Recommendation Of Prison Assn.

SALEM — The Oregon Prison Assn. proposed to the Board of Control Tuesday that a youth authority be created to decide on the custody of juvenile offenders.

The association also proposed that the new state reformatory be used for juvenile, rather than penal, offenders.

The youth authority would be given power to transfer boys from MacLaren School to the reformatory.

The reformatory, which is to be completed in two years, now would be used for the first offenders, with no age limit.

The prison association wants it used for youthful offenders who are sentenced under juvenile laws.

Gov. Elmo Smith told the association it should put its recommendations in writing for the Legislature.

The association said that MacLaren School is becoming badly overcrowded. William Ryan, secretary of the Board of Control, agreed, saying that Oregon soon would need another training school.

Oregon To Observe Pearl Harbor Day

SALEM — Gov. Elmo Smith designated Friday as Pearl Harbor Day.

Observance of the day, he said, would call attention to the "ever-present need for national preparedness and in fostering the values of courage and will to victory uncovered by Pearl Harbor in 1941."
