

Bondes Finish First In Movie Glamor Year

By JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD — Even a jealous goddess would have to admit that blondes cause the most talk—and most headlines—among movie queens, it was blondes four to one in 1956 headlines.
It took one of the most beautiful women in the world, Elizabeth Taylor, for the brunettes even to make a showing.
As headline makers, here's how Hollywood rates them:
GRACE KELLY, Jayne Mansfield, Marilyn Monroe, Elizabeth Taylor and Diana Dors.
For Miss Kelly, the year was a triumph both artistically and romantically. Her April marriage to Prince Rainier of Monaco was one of the most widely publicized events of this or any other year.
Winner of an Oscar the previous year, she soared to new triumphs in 1956 with brilliant comedy performances in "The Swan" and "High Society."
ON THE CINDERELLA side, Miss Mansfield scored the greatest single rise of the year—and probably provoked the most whistles with her measurements of 40-19-35. "Aren't they fantastic?" she quipped to a reporter. And it's a classic of understatement.
When Jayne left Hollywood late in 1955, she had trouble getting through the studio gate without a pass. When she returned several months ago, she got the welcome usually reserved for Oscar winners and visiting royalty.
A little play called "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?" was the reason. The play wasn't much but Jayne, wrapped in a towel onstage, was.
Her knack for getting publicity paid off, too. She is at the point in her career where veteran publicity men take notes everytime she makes an entrance.
MISS MONROE, no stranger to headlines, became a good actress in 1956. Her portrayal of the broken down night club "chantoise" in "Bus Stop" was sheer perfection. But her dramatics, as always, played second fiddle to her other assets. Her first visit to London, to co-star with Sir Laurence Olivier in the "Sleeping Prince" turned into one of the most riotous press conferences on record.
Also front page was her lowest gown worn when she first met Queen Elizabeth at a command performance.
ELIZABETH TAYLOR did more to bolster the ego of older men in 1956 than the invention of the toupée. She made headlines by divorcing Michael Wilding, 20 years her senior, and then falling "passionately" in love with Mike Todd, even older than Wilding.
It also was a great year for her theatrically. Her performance in "Giant" was one of the year's best.
MISS DORS came to the United States as Miss Monroe went to England. It was a draw for the headlines.

Hollywood's 1956 Was Quiet Year; Film Industry Works Hard To Survive Against TV

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD — 'Tis the season not only to be jolly, but also to round up the year's events.
Hollywood's 1956 was a quiet year. There were scarcely any scandals. Few new stars came along. There were no untimely deaths such as those that marred 1955 — James Dean, Susan Ball, Robert Francis, John Hodiak, Carmen Miranda.
The film industry seemed intent on survival. The result was harder work and generally better pictures.
The year brought sweeping changes in studio management. Warner Brothers sold out to the bankers. Darryl Zanuck, Dore Schary, Don Hartman and Jerry Wald stepped out as studio chiefs.
This was the year the dam broke. The backlogs of MGM, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Warner Brothers and Columbia were flooding the TV market. Dire results were predicted for theater business. So far, it has managed to survive.
Now I'll take a deep breath and offer my annual picks of the leading events of the Hollywood year:
Best pictures — "Around the World in 80 Days," "Giant," "War and Peace," "The King and I," "Moby Dick."
Best actresses — Deborah Kerr, "Tea and Sympathy"; Katharine Hepburn, "The Rainmaker"; Elizabeth Taylor, "Giant"; Ingrid Bergman, "Anastasia"; Carroll Baker, "Baby Doll."
Best actors — James Dean, "Rebel Without a Cause"; Paul Newman, "Somebody Up There Likes Me"; Kirk Douglas, "Lust for Life"; Burt Lancaster, "The Rainmaker"; Laurence Olivier, "Richard III."
Biggest publicity splash — Diana Dors.
Most promising newcomers — Anthony Perkins, Jayne Mansfield.
Best foreign picture — "La Strada."
Biggest wedding — Grace Kelly-Prince Rainier.
Best documentary — "The Silent World."
Biggest spectacle — "The 10 Commandments."
Least surprising split — Martin and Lewis.
Best musical — "The King and I."
Fastest rising star — Kim Novak.
Most improvement — Marilyn Monroe in "Bus Stop."
Most over-publicized picture — "Trapeze."
Best picture of over-publicized personality — Elvis Presley.
Turkey of the year — "The Vagabond King."
Best hope — for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Melrose Teacher Visits Daughter In Klamath Falls

By NETTIE WOODRUFF
Mrs. Laura Ware, a teacher in the Melrose school, spent part of the holidays in Klamath Falls with her daughter, Mrs. Doris Arnold. Mrs. Max Pennie, also a local teacher, with Mr. Pennie visited during the vacation in San Francisco with their daughter, Mrs. Marcello Giannini, and family.
Visit Richardson
Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Myers and daughter, Karen, spent Christmas in Albany with her brother, Gene Richardson, and family.
The primary grades of the Melrose school entertained their mothers at a musical program preceding the holidays. Following the entertainment all members of the school adjourned to the cafeteria room where refreshments were served to them and their mothers and treats were presented to the children by the PTA. Mrs. Don Rose was pianist for the program and also presented a piñata.
Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Lindstrom and daughter spent some time with their son and wife in Corvallis and also visited a daughter and family in Washington during the holidays.
Mr. and Mrs. Gene Foley and family have purchased the George James home and will move into it soon.

RECONCILIATION APPEARANCE—Actress Jeanne Crain and Paul Brinkman, subjects of much publicized divorce proceedings, are shown arriving together to attend exclusive $125,000 party thrown by Texas oilman David (Tex) Feldman at Romanoff's in Hollywood New Year's Eve. Feldman, who reportedly has income of $7,000,000 dollars a year, took over the Hollywood club for two days to convert the nightspot's Crown Room into a turn of the century Delmonico's.
