ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. — The first air to air atomic rocket fired from a plane burst over the desert Friday with a flash that paled the morning sun.

The Air Defense Command's newest and most powerful weapon exploded at 5 a. m. PST.

The vivid fireball flared in the target area at an altitude of more than 15,000 feet and sent up a pink doughnut-shaped cloud.

The nuclear rocket was released from a Northrop F89 Scorpion jet fighter.

As the rocket's cloud rose in stately fashion into clear blue sky, the vapor trail of an airplane, probably the launcher, cut sharply away to the north.

The cloud assumed somewhat the shape of the usual atomic mushroom, but the crown quickly separated from the filmy stem and floated with a creamy white foam expanding from the pink center.

The last was more than 12 miles from News Nob where observers were stationed.

The launching plane was the leader in a formation of three Scorpion jets. The rocket was the Genie, manufactured by Douglas Aircraft Co.

Power of the weapon was announced only as "well below normal." A nominal bomb is rated as the energy equivalent of 20,000 tons of TNT. From the size of the fireball and the noise of the explosion it seemed likely that it was far down in the range of kilotons.

Rockets On Inventory

Col. J. H. Atkinson, commander of the Air Defense Command, disclosed before the test that air to air rockets with atomic warheads already are in the inventory of his force. The weapons are designed to knock down invading bombers.

Col. Atkinson said defense command planes do not carry these weapons but they could be put

EUGENE — Fire Chief Robert Waters of the Fire Department chided painters for putting a stop to painting fire plugs to match the color of their houses.

He said it would help the firemen if people quit landscaping the fireplugs with shrubbery and flowers, too.

He expressed the hope the plugs will stay that color this time.

—Donald Joseph Wedler, 34 (above), now serving a 10-year term in prison at Deland, Fla. has confessed to beating a housewife to death in Cleveland about the same time Marilyn Sheppard was killed in 1954. Dr. Samuel Sheppard is serving a life sentence for slaying his wife. Wedler described with great detail and clarity how he entered the Sheppard home and committed the crime.

Detector Gives Confessor Okay

DELAND, Fla. — A lie detector expert says Donald Wedler has told "the truth or what he believes to be the truth" about the slaying of Mrs. Samuel Sheppard in Cleveland, Ohio.

Alex Gregory of Detroit made such an announcement Thursday after a second examination of the 23-year-old prisoner who on Monday "confessed" a crime resembling the Sheppard slaying in July, 1954.

The "confession" is regarded with skepticism by Cleveland police.

Gregory, representing a non-official group of criminologists who call themselves the Court of Last Resort, has been interested in the Sheppard case for some time.

Each side will be allowed four hours to present its argument.

According to Mrs. Edson, Sr. who stayed in Corvallis with her son, healing from the operation has progressed. Though the operation took 11 hours, much of that time was devoted to a thorough search of areas to which malignancy, which began with a mole, might possibly have spread to skin grafts. Only two malignant areas were found, and results of a blood analysis indicated the cancer had not gone into the blood.

House Slashes Economic Aid

WASHINGTON — The House voted 155-74 today to slash one-third of the economic aid fund President Eisenhower asked to support defense programs of America's allies.

The standing vote, subject to a later rollcall, amounted to a reversal in a see-saw battle as the House began a day of showdown voting on Eisenhower's multibillion-dollar aid bill.

The House action would slash a ceiling of 600 million dollars on the defense support fund for the coming year. Eisenhower originally sought 900 million for this fund, which he says is needed to shore up economies of poor, anti-communist countries like Korea and Formosa which border the Iron Curtain.

At one point, the House had cut the figure to 500 million.

Then on an early vote Friday it voted to add 300 million, bringing the fund up to 800 million dollars. This action was taken on a 172-154 teller vote.

In a series of moves and counter-moves Friday, Eisenhower supporters then lost 101-149 a vote to hold the figure to 600 million. Then the first cutting move, by Rep. Wayne Hays (D-Ohio), trimmed the amount to 600 million dollars.

Neuberger Lashes At Ike; Sneers At McKay Choice

WASHINGTON — Sen. Neuberger (D-Ore) Thursday accused President Eisenhower of lack of knowledge and lack of enthusiasm for the civil rights bill and termed Douglas McKay's appointment to the International Joint Commission as "incredible."

In a Senate speech Thursday, Neuberger said that if the civil rights bill were being fought over in the Senate it "frittered away in compromises and weakening amendments." The President will be to blame.

He said Eisenhower has "made infinitely more difficult the task of those who have hoped, earnestly and sincerely, that at last we were to see meaningful and effective civil rights legislation enacted."

Sen. Morse (D-Ore) supported Neuberger's position and added that the President's recent comments on civil rights were conflicting and meaningless.

Discussing McKay's appointment to the agency which will attempt to work out an agreement with Canada to increase the power

Federal Costs Stay In Black

WASHINGTON — A surplus of $1,645,000,000 was recorded by the federal government for the fiscal year which ended June 30.

The Treasury and the Budget Bureau reported the amount Friday.

The balance for fiscal 1957 was the second successive black-in-k showing. A third balanced budget recommended by President Eisenhower now is pending before Congress.

Lower Than Estimate

The surplus was lower than the most recent official estimate made in January, although much greater than the original surplus Eisenhower predicted when he submitted his budget for the 1957 fiscal year in January 1956.

Eisenhower's estimate then called for expenditures of $65,865,000,000 and receipts of $66,300,000,000, for a surplus of 435 million dollars.

By January of this year, however, revised estimates put spending at $68,900,000,000 and receipts at $70,628,000,000, for a surplus of $1,728,000,000.

Spending Under 70 Billion

The statement issued by Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey and director Percival Brundage of the Budget Bureau showed federal receipts of $70,989,000,000 and expenditures of $69,344,000,000 for the 12 months ending June 30.

Expenditures were 444 million dollars higher than were estimated in January when the fiscal year was half over, while receipts were 361 million dollars higher than the January estimate.

The public debt at the end of the bookkeeping year was $270,634,309,846, a reduction of $2,190,378 from the level a year earlier.

Teacher Cannot Be A Legislator

OREGON CITY — Thomas Monaghan, Milwaukie, cannot legally be both a public school teacher and a member of the Oregon Legislature, Circuit Judge Rainn Holman ruled here.

Holman's decision upheld an earlier ruling by Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton.

Dams, Reservoirs Controlled By Law

(This is the second of a series of articles on farm reservoirs. The articles have been prepared by Andrew H. Schmidt, a registered professional engineer. Schmidt is employed by the California Oregon Power Co. and was formerly with the USDA Soil Conservation Service.)

Farmers, who build dams and create reservoirs, must comply with Oregon state laws that control such projects. Non-compliance might mean filling of the reservoir would be forbidden by state officials.

The law holds that water in a stream belongs to the state. This is true whether the stream is the Umpqua River, Elk Creek, Deer Creek, or even a small channel that flows only after a rainstorm.

During the summer, water from many streams cannot be stored because someone already has the right to use the water. For example, around Glendale the local irrigation groups are entitled to use the summer flow of many of the small streams. Another example is Lookingglass Creek; its summer flow cannot be run into a reservoir and stored because farmers along the creek already have the right to use all of the water. The law, however, provides that farmers and others who have a real need for water can apply for a permit to use or store unallotted water from the streams.

Permits Available

A permit to store and use water in a reservoir is obtained through the State Engineer's Office. The permittee must complete two forms as follows:

- 1—Application for a permit to construct reservoir and to store for beneficial use the unappointed waters of the State of Oregon.
- 2—Application for permit to appropriate the public waters of the State of Oregon.

These blank forms can be obtained from the state engineer at Salem.

Seepage Estimated

Pits or trenches, no doubt, will be necessary at the site. These pits will enable the engineer to estimate the amount of water seepage expected from the reservoir. Soil samples will be collected for laboratory testing. The pits can be dug with a shovel, but a small dozer or back-hoe will do the job at a low cost.

After surveys are completed, the storage capacity can be accurately determined.

One last point; it concerns rights-of-way. A permit granted by the state engineer does not include ingress or egress across another's property to build a dam or install ditches or pipe lines. If a right-of-way is necessary, an attorney can advise you how to arrange for it.

The next article will tell the amount of storage needed for each acre of land irrigated.

Forms Sent To Salem

Back to the application forms. After completing them, the forms are sent to the state engineer. You will either receive authority to proceed with work or you will be told why permission cannot be granted. Allow two to six months for handling of the applications.

If the dam is more than ten feet high or stores more than 9.2 acre-feet of water, detailed plans and specifications must be sent to the state engineer for approval. He will examine the plans. In some cases when plans are to be approved, the state engineer will require changes in the plans before approving construction.

To obtain information for planning and to check whether the project is feasible, surveys are made. An engineer must survey the reservoir and dam site.

Soil Conservation Service personnel assigned to a local soil conservation district are available to provide a limited amount of assistance in planning an earth dam which stores water for agricultural purposes. An office at Sutherlin serves the North Douglas Soil Conservation District and the office in Reedsport assists the Umpqua Soil Conservation District. Private engineers also can provide this service quickly and efficiently.
