Rookie Status Of Malzone Questioned By News Scribe

NEW YORK (AP)—Jack Sanford, ace of the Philadelphia Phillies pitching staff, appears to have a stranglehold on the National League Rookie of the Year award. But the voting for American League honors is liable to wind up in a state of confusion. The player involved is Frank Malzone, Boston Red Sox third baseman. The big question: Is he or is he not a rookie? The facts are these:

1. Malzone played in 27 games last season. He batted 103 times and had a .165 average.

2. No one seems to know what constitutes a rookie.

3. No regulation is likely to be put on the books this year.

Writer Has Opinion
The president of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, Dan Daniel of the New York World-Telegram and Sun, believes that Malzone, who is having a fine season, is not a first-year player.

"How can a player who actually failed as a rookie last season and played as much as he did be eligible this year? It just isn't fair. In my opinion Sanford and Tony Kubek of the Yankees should win," he said.

Daniel pointed out quickly that, although he selects the writers who will participate in the post-season balloting (there are three from each major league city), he will not attempt to influence any of them.

Writers Disagree
"We tried to come up with a ruling last month in St. Louis," said Daniel. "But the writers couldn't get together. Some of them felt as I did that players with 15 or more games or pitchers with five complete games in previous seasons should not be eligible."

In 1956 this season, Malzone has put together a .305 batting average. He has hit eight home runs and batted five positions for the Yankees, has appeared in 84 games. He also shows a .305 batting mark but he's had only two homers and 25 RBIs.

Sanford, who pitched in three games in 1956, has won 15 games and lost only four. He leads his circuit in strikeouts with 142 and has an earned run average of 2.93.

Patty Berg Winner In Tam O'Shanter

CHICAGO (AP)—Patty Berg figures she has plenty of more "words" to conquer.

"Retire? Me? I've made up my mind to play until I'm 50," said the red-haired perennial tournament favorite, who is 39.

She'll be back trying for her fifth "world" championship at Tam O'Shanter next year.

She won the $5,000 top prize and the "world" crown yesterday in an 18-hole playoff with 37-year-old Fay Crocker of Montevideo, Uruguay.

They tied at 302 after the regulation 72 holes Sunday, the tie coming when Patty rolled in a 25-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the last hole.

Patty fired a 1-over-par 77 to beat Miss Crocker by two strokes in the playoff. The first prize, biggest award in women's golf, boosted Patty's winnings to $15,768. No. 1 position on the women's PGA money list.

Miss Crocker settled for $2,000, and is No. 2 on the list with $10,796.

Rademacher Sure He Will Defeat Floyd Patterson

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—Balding, 28-year-old Pete Rademacher may still be an amateur as far as money is concerned the morning of Aug. 23, but he is confident that he'll also be heavyweight champion of the boxing world.

The 210-pound Olympic heavyweight king insists he will dethrone champion Floyd Patterson and confound the experts who say the Aug. 22 scrap in Seattle will be a worse mismatch than the Patterson-Hurricane Jackson title fight.

"With no television and with a $250,000 guarantee for Patterson, I might wind up with money out of pocket," said Rademacher, "but it will be worth it."

Patterson stopped Jackson in 10 rounds, but the beating he gave the challenger failed to impress Rademacher. He saw the fight on television and commented afterward, "I haven't changed my opinion that I can beat him."

Lacks Power
Rademacher conceded that Patterson is plenty fast, but he remains unconvinced that the champion has enough power to hurt a good big man—Rademacher, for instance.

"It seemed strange to me that he didn't salt Jackson away. Patterson didn't seem to take advantage of the situation he had created when he got Jackson in trouble," said Rademacher after watching Floyd deck the Hurricane twice in the early rounds of their battle in New York.

"Patterson hits so fast that I believe most of his blows are lacking in power. It seems to me that a man in Jackson's condition after those first and second rounds shouldn't have been in there until the 10th," the amateur champion declared.

Chemerer, who has worked with Rademacher since 1950, does most of the talking for the big fellow. He rates Pete as "a pro already" and has little patience with critics who decry Rademacher's lack of professional experience.

"The guy has been boxing for 10 years. He's like a pro to me. He fights like one. The only difference is he's never got paid for it," says Chemerer, who began training Rademacher when Pete was a Washington State College undergraduate.

Three Straight KO's
Rademacher wrote Chemerer then, asking if he could use the trainer's Evergreen gym in Seattle to work out. Chemerer saw him kazo three opponents in one night in Golden Gloves competition at Tacoma. He trained him for three years and watched him win the national Golden Gloves crown at Boston in 1953.

When Rademacher won his Olympic berth last year at San Francisco, Chemerer was there.

The challenger scored three straight knockouts in Melbourne last December to win the Olympic championship.

Patterson isn't inclined to understate Rademacher's amateur opposition.

"Anyone who wins an Olympic title has to be good to beat the world's best amateurs. I am going to be fully prepared," the champion said the other day.

He had better be, according to

Chemerer, who takes Rademacher as seriously as the challenger regards himself.

More Mature
"Pete is a mature man, whereas Patterson still hasn't reached maturity," says Chemerer. "He can take a punch and throw one, and he does have the big punch."

Rademacher and Chemerer aren't talking about "battle plans," but Rademacher says "I expect to make full use of my physical advantages." He claims a 4½ inch advantage in reach over the smaller Patterson and will probably carry a 25-pound weight advantage into the ring.

The challenger has never gone more than a few rounds in a fight (amateurs usually fight three rounds), but that doesn't mean the Rademacher-Chemerer firm will shoot for a quick knockout.

"We'll fight the fight we think necessary to win," Chemerer said. Rademacher said his mind has been set on landing the championship for two years and he had not had time to make any fistie plans beyond Aug. 22.

Patterson Arrives In Seattle, Wash.

SEATTLE (AP)—Floyd Patterson, world's heavyweight champion, came to Seattle Monday to collect $250,000 for climbing into the same boxing ring with the world's amateur champion, Pete Rademacher.

The 22-year-old titleholder stepped from the train after his long, transcontinental journey looking fit and ready to go any time. His fight is set for the night of Aug. 22 in Sicks' Stadium.

Asked if he were taking the second defense of his title seriously, Patterson replied:

"I've got to take Pete serious. He's a pro. You have to be an excellent fighter to qualify for the Olympics and in my book, Rademacher, with all his experience, ranks as a pro."

The champion and his followers were taken by automobile to nearby Kent where Patterson will begin training. Rademacher already is in training at Issaquah, a few miles away.

Patterson guessed his weight at about 186 pounds, just a couple of pounds more than he weighed when he knocked out Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson in New York July 29.

Patterson loosened up coming out on the train, working out in the baggage car, but still figured he had gained a pound or so. "I eat real well on the train," he said.

Rademacher chalked up his 84th round of leather tossing Sunday with two brisk stanzas with his sparring partners.

Rademacher will take Monday off but will have a complete physical checkup by three Seattle physicians.

PEEK-A-BOO — Representing the large and small of the Pacific Coast League players are Albie Pearson of the Seals and Steve (The Beast) Bilko of Los Angeles. Albie is virtually lost behind the huge frame of the Angels king pin.

John Pitters, who has had trials with the Pittsburg Pirates, paced the Southern Assn. in home runs in 1956. He hit 39 for New Orleans.

Marv Throneberry, New York Yankee rookie first baseman, drove in 145 runs for Denver last season to lead the American Assn.

Radio, Television Spurned In Heavyweight Title Joust

By JACK HEWINS
SEATTLE (AP)—No radio, no television.

When Floyd Patterson and Pete Rademacher meet here Aug. 22 it will be the first time a heavyweight championship fight has not been broadcast since the Roaring Twenties when Jack Dempsey was king of the ring.

Promoter Jack Hurley, who has opined over television that television is a monster, said Friday he will not permit radio and TV even if he has a complete sellout of the $400,000-capacity Sicks' Seattle Stadium.

"It wouldn't be fair to the people who have bought tickets," asserted the gaunt, plain-spoken man known hereabouts as "The Deacon." He has been a foe of TV for many years, claiming it was "giving me out of business by running away my product."

Even Hurley's best friends are puzzled that he can cold-shoulder the added thousands that television and radio could bring. They have heard him remark that "a man's only hobby should be counting his money."

Probing his memory, Hurley said the first heavyweight title fight given radio coverage was the Dempsey-Georges Carpenter bout in 1921. All others since have been broadcast and—in recent years—telecast.

This decision means Rademacher's cut of the gate will be zero. Pete's backers in Georgia have put up a $250,000 guarantee for Patterson and will take 50 per cent of the gate. With a $400,000 sellout, that leaves the Rademacher camp $10,000 short of breaking even.

For newly Pete this is nothing new. An amateur fighter for eight onto 15 years, the Olympic champion is accustomed to collecting no money for displaying his ring talents.

He regards it as a scandalous risk. Should he defeat Patterson—something most fight experts regard as purely impossible—the farm boy from Grandview, Wash., believes he could get out into the ficlie pastures and reap a bumper crop of greenbacks.

Should it go the full 15 rounds, Rademacher's fate will rest in the hands of Tommy Loughran, the former light-heavyweight champion who will referee the bout. Hurley said the ex-champ will be in complete charge. "With no judges to confuse the issue," Rademacher has been training for the past week at Issaquah, a little dairy town huddled in the folds of the Cascade Mountains east of Seattle.

Patterson is due here Monday and will set up headquarters at Kent, a small community a few miles south of Seattle.

Plans for the Drain recreation night scheduled for tonight have been directed, according to Pat Wohlers, director of the night's activities.

The activities, which will start at 5 p.m., include a spaghetti feed at the picnic area from 5-7 p.m., with Mrs. Dick Duncan in charge.

After the dinner there will be recreation activities at the ball field from 7-9 p.m. These will include three one-inning pee-wee baseball games between the six Drain clubs, six badminton games of six points a game and a three inning softball game between the Drain Silk Sox, women's softball team and the Drain State Junior League baseball team.

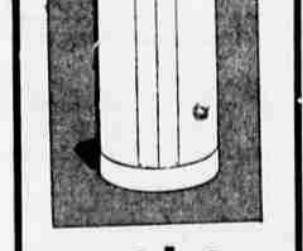

The Dalles, Banks Win In ABS Eliminations

PORTLAND (AP)—The Dalles and Banks kept their hopes alive in the Oregon American Amateur Monday night.

The Dalles defeated West Linn, 5-0, behind the three-hit pitching of Denny Peterson, and Banks downed the Bashor Babes of Portland, 7-4.

The losers dropped from the double-elimination tournament.

Williams, Mays Top Sluggers In Majors

NEW YORK (AP)—Ted Williams, the fabulous thumper of the Boston Red Sox, and Willie Mays of the New York Giants Tuesday boasted the highest slugging averages in the major leagues.

Williams has compiled 250 total bases in 346 times at bat for a slugging mark of .723. The 38-year-old outfielder has 24 doubles, one triple and 30 homers.

Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees, who is challenging Williams for the American League batting lead, also is a close second in the slugging competition.

Mantle has a .708 slugging average on 260 total bases in 367 trips.

The Yanks' star centerfielder, numbers 20 doubles, four triples and 31 homers among his 139 hits.

Figures compiled by The Associated Press also revealed that Mays tops the National League by a slim margin over Milwaukee's Hank Aaron.

Mays is slugging .630 with 266 total bases in 422 at bats while Aaron is at .628 with 273 total bases—the most in the majors—in 435 tries. Among Willie's extra bases are 19 doubles, 15 triples and 26 homers. Aaron has a league-leading total of 32 home runs.
