Winter Wheat Crop Forecast At High Figure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department forecast next year's winter wheat crop at 906,272,000 bushels Thursday.

This crop, which was seeded during the past fall, compares with 707,201,000 produced this year and 862,471,000 for the ten-year (1946-55) average.

It is being grown under rigid federal marketing quotas and a soil bank land retirement program designed to hold down surplus production.

No forecast was given for the combined winter and spring wheat crop production inasmuch as the spring crop will not be planted until next spring.
