Gov. Holmes Labels Veto 'Economic Myopia'
SALEM — President Eisenhower's veto of the water projects bill was called "economic myopia" by Gov. Robert D. Holmes.

The governor said: "It seems extremely shortsighted to me to block any efforts which Congress can agree on to combat recession. There is no question of the worthiness of the Yaquina and Siuslaw projects, and it will be particularly damaging to these two areas if the veto is allowed to stand. I have sincere hopes that Congress will override the veto."
The governor telegraphed the President an appeal that he sign the bill providing additional funds for highway construction.

Ex-Convict Uses Science Demonstration In Attempt To Convert Prison Inmates

PHILADELPHIA — Jim Vaus, of Grants Pass, Ore., an ex-convict and wiretap expert, used more than two tons of scientific equipment recently in an attempt to convert inmates at Eastern State Penitentiary.

JIM VAUS
... converts prisoners

The 38-year-old ordained minister, once hired by West Coast gambler Mickey Cohen because of his wiretapping skills, has been lecturing at the prison for the past three days.
He used the equipment, which includes stereophonic amplifiers, broadcasting and recording sets and a machine called a Tesla coil that produces nearly a million volts of electricity, to emphasize his argument that a Christian life is the only life.
Holds Experiment
At one point in his lecture, Vaus pressed a button, causing electricity to leap from the coil. He then asked for a volunteer to hold the coil during a repeat of the demonstration. One of the 125 prisoners present held the coil which, when activated, merely hummed ominously.
Vaus then used amplifiers to indicate the presence of sound unheard by human ears.
"These experiments show that many times there are things you know exist that can't be seen, felt or heard. It's the same thing with religion," he said.
Vaus, who after his release from prison in 1949 was converted by evangelist Billy Graham, told the inmates that it was while attending college in his home town that he tried to prove religion and science could not go hand in hand. He said he finally came to the belief that each was necessary to the other.
Involved With Cohen
It was after the war, he said, that he first became involved with Cohen.
"Cohen called me to his home. He said he heard that I had a reputation as a wiretapper among Hollywood notables and he wanted me to locate a microphone he knew police had hidden in his home."
"I told him I wasn't interested but he began pulling $100 bills off a roll and I soon became interested," Vaus said.
At the end of his talk, Vaus asked the prisoners to raise their hands in a gesture declaring themselves for Christ. About a dozen inmates raised their hands and the session ended with prayers for the new converts.

President Tito Wins Third Term

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — When Parliament president Peter Stambolic announced Tito's unanimous reelection, a dozen guns outside boomed a 21-gun salute. Then Tito, who will be 66 next month, marched into the chamber.
Parliament also elected 24 members of the federal executive council — Tito's cabinet. These included all of his close associates.
