HOSPITAL NOTES

(Charles V. Stanton, editor and manager of The News-Review, was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage April 29 which nearly took his life. After eight days of coma and semi-consciousness, he began recovering steadily. A yardstick of the extent of his recovery is today's editorial. It was written from his bed at Sacred Heart Hospital in Eugene, his first editorial to appear in this column since May 5.)

By Charles V. Stanton

SACRED HEART HOSPITAL, EUGENE, Ore. — In a few more days, I am told, I am going to be released from this establishment.

I believe I told once before how a hospital is the perfect form of security. So many people today seem to think that security is the chief aim of life. They're willing to give anything for it.

A hospital takes care of you 24 hours a day. Your every wish is supplied. People give their time to keep you happy.

Do we look forward to getting out?

We sure do. It will be nearly two months ago that I came in here with a brain hemorrhage. The doctors tell me I was a very lucky man. According to what they tell me, my hemorrhage was one of the "underneath" type. That's the same kind Eisenhower had. Mine was worse, of course! But from what they say, a person makes full recovery and has no permanent or ill effects. The hemorrhage doesn't happen again. A man dies from something else.

I guess from what I'm told, I wasn't far from the pearly gates for awhile. I was unconscious for about two weeks, and it seems I was quite a hostile character.

I came in with a hemorrhage, went into stomach ulcers, then had to have an "old man's" operation. (Someone should tell my dad about this. He's only 87.) So, now I am on the convalescent list. I seem to have had about all they offered.

About three years ago, I was in this hospital for a spinal operation. At that time, I met the "unforgettable character," Father Pius Bravauskas. He was a DP from Lithuania. I said at that time he could have been a multimillionaire with the pictures he paints, but he chose the vows of poverty. Today, safe in the freedom of America and now an American citizen, he has produced many pictures with brightness and color. Far different from the somber, foreboding views lighted only by a holy scene, that first came from his personal tragedy and that of his homeland. He recently showed some of his fine paintings in the University of Oregon art gallery and won widespread acclaim.

Incidentally, his sixth floor studio smelled too much of paint and the sisters chased him to a roof penthouse. He is the hospital chaplain.

I have made many warm friends here — even the nurse. I am told I treated mighty rough in the early days of my illness. I can't name them all, but I love the sister in charge of this floor. She is from Ireland and she sure shows it. I got her goat at first by calling her my "Scotch" sister. She would get very red and angry. Then she learned it was only a game. She isn't bigger than a minute, but she is a fine administrator.

If I tried to name all the nurses and aides who have been so good to me, it would take a newspaper larger than this one. And if I tried to thank each and every one of you for the cards, letters, flowers and prayers, I would spend the rest of my life.

When I get out of this place, it will be several weeks before I get back to the new room. But soon, I hope, I'll be home with all you good folk.

By Mrs. GERALD B. FOX

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hutto and daughter, Alma Grace, Mrs. Ruth Miller and Mrs. Dorena Smith, all of Glendale, have returned from a ten day trip to California.

Mrs. Miller visited her brother, John Bourbon at Santa Maria. She also accompanied Mrs. Smith to visit the Ray Poulson family at former Glendale place, at Glendale, Calif.

Ball Autographed

The Huttos visited her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dotson, in Los Angeles. While there they attended a major league ball game and were fortunate enough to retrieve the first ball which came into the stands. They were able to get Carl Surillo to autograph it. They also visited Marine Land of the Pacific where Sea Hunt TV pictures are taken. Mrs. Hutto especially enjoyed a visit to the Forest Lawn Memorial Park which is also called the American Westminister Abbey.

Whiting Martin of Old Highway 99, near Glendale, got bits of wood and bark in his right eye last week while cutting wood. He was hospitalized at Sacred Heart Hospital in Medford after the bits of wood were removed and several stitches taken in the eye. Medical attendants believe that Martin will have no impairment of vision from the accident.

luck disposing legally of these shady characters who haunt the tenderloins of our big and crowded cities. But in the long run, a lot of them seem to be finished off by their own disgruntled pals. Thus justice, in a back alley sort of way, is done.

Still more teletype chatter: The flag business isn't actively lobbying for the Alaska statehood bill, but an official of one of the oldest flag making concerns in the country says that if the bill does pass at this session of congress and Alaska becomes a state the nation's flag industry will leap from a depression into a boom.

How come? On the day when either Alaska or Hawaii becomes a state EVERY AMERICAN FLAG IN EXISTENCE WILL BECOME OBSOLETE. On that day, the OFFICIAL FLAG will contain 49 stars. Present flags will mean a big new market for flags.

Screwball thought: Suppose something should happen that would cause every dwelling in the United States to become as obsolete as a 48-star flag will be when the 49th state is added to the Union.

What a boom there would be out here in the lumber country!

That suggests a startling thought: OBSCOLESCENCE IS THE BIGGEST FACTOR IN MODERN BUSINESS.

For example: Suppose some bright young inventor should come up tomorrow with a feasible and practical jet engine that would revolutionize the automobile as completely as the first aviation jet revolutionized the airplane.

In that event, every automobile in the country would be obsolete and every owner would want a new one. The now depressed automobile industry would then boom like a gold rush town.

Former Scientist Missing 6 Years Found By Police

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — One day six years ago Albert Clark Reed, a scientist at the California Institute of Technology, said goodbye to his wife, patting his son's head, left home, and disappeared.

The FBI, police, family and friends were baffled. The trail led 50 miles east to San Bernardino, then grew cold.

His wife, Florence, never gave up hope that he would return. Yesterday he was discovered working as a groom at Hollywood Park.

"I don't know why I left," he told newsmen. "I was — still am — crazy and confused."

"The day I left I sold my car, took a bus and went to Phoenix. I got a job handling freight."

Later he got a job handling horses and returned to California, working at various tracks. His identity was discovered through a routine fingerprint check. He was using the name Alfred C. Reese.

Reed, a Caltech graduate and World War II test pilot, was working as an aeronautical consultant on secret project when he disappeared. Police say there are no charges against him.

Reed, balding, 31, was told his son Timothy, 12, has been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Dudley B. Smith, Larchmont, N.Y. Smith, a patent attorney, is Mrs. Reed's cousin.

Reed chatted with the boy last night by phone.

Reed later had a tearful reunion with his mother, Mrs. Cora Reed, of nearby Glendale.

But his homecoming also was marked by sadness. He learned that his wife died in December 1955 of cancer.
