CLEVELAND (AP) — The secretary of the Seventh-Day Adventists' Southern Africa division told the denomination's world conference Thursday that Christianity will be demonstrated everywhere when it is demonstrated in the home among husband, wife, parents and children.

Pastor W. Duncan Eva, from Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, used a text from the Apostle Paul in an address to 1,200 Adventists attending the 48th world conference which began June 19 and continues through Saturday.

"Be subject to one another out of reverence for Christ," was the text, and Pastor Eva noted that it "sounds strange indeed" in a world in which never before have "so many been so keenly aware of their rights, not only national but individual."

The wife, he said, belongs to Christ before she belongs to the husband. And parents "must recognize that our children, even from their earliest years have a God-given individuality — that they, too, are Christ's before they are ours."

"This leaves no room for harshness and irritability of temper and the spirit of autocracy that challenges the resistance of children," he continued.

Delegates also heard a report Thursday by Pastor George A. Huse of Washington, D.C., that the Adventists' publishing department, of which he is secretary, had world literature sales in the last four years amounting to $81,193,300.

This was an increase of 36 per cent, or 2 1/2 million dollars over the previous quadrennium, he said. Major publishing houses are in Washington, D.C., near San Francisco and in Nashville, Tenn.

At Lincoln, Neb., the Christian Benevolent Assn. publishes books and magazines in Braille for free distribution to the blind.

Throughout the world the Adventists have 42 publishing houses which employ 2,000 persons printing literature in 213 languages, Pastor Huse reported.

Inmates Receive Certificates From Prison School

SALEM (AP) — Fifty-two state penitentiary inmates received graduation certificates in a ceremony at the prison school Tuesday.

Equivalency certificates, which equal high school diplomas, were issued to 25 inmates. These certificates are accepted for admission to Oregon institutions of higher learning.

Another 27 were graduated from the 8th grade.

Dr. Rex Putnam, state superintendent of public instruction, told the student body that the certificates should help them get jobs when they are released.

The school contains 200 inmates. Between 130 and 180 others take college correspondence courses from the state Board of Higher Education. Dr. Putnam said the inmates have achieved B plus averages in their college courses.

Director of the school is William F. Kennedy, who has two civilian assistants and 23 inmates-teachers.

Benson Heartened By Farm Picture, Will Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heartened by this year's upturn in farm prices and income and by recent farm legislative developments, Secretary of Agriculture Benson is preparing a campaign for the Republicans this fall even more actively than before.

An assistant said that Benson probably will make more speeches than any other Cabinet officer and more than he has ever made before in a similar campaign.

Benson was said to feel that agriculture as an issue may be minimized both because of the improvement in farm prices and also because the Senate Agriculture Committee, controlled by Democrats, has approved farm legislative proposals along the line recommended by the administration.

Glide Schools Hire Director Of Vocal Music

By MRS. ARTHUR SELBY

The position of vocal music director for Glide Schools has been filled, Supt. Harry Harvie reported.

He was a member of the College Glee Club and the Madrigal Singers of the college; is experienced in directing church choirs, and other musical activities. He is also a member of the Mu music fraternity. Gould is single and his home is at Milwaukie.

Every church should remember its young men in the service. They constitute a mighty evangelistic challenge," he continued.

Pastor Chambers said the 25-year-old Seventh-Day Adventist medical cadet corps training program has trained 22,000 young men since 1930. The young men enter it voluntarily and at their own expense for training in military procedures, first aid, drill and army terminology.

Adventist young men are non-combatants in military service, but often serve as medical corpsmen.

Another speaker said that if Americans are to recover their self-confidence and accustomed leadership, potential geniuses must be discovered and developed by the state and the church.

Hope Seen Milk Program Will Be Continued

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm leaders expressed confidence Thursday that Congress will not allow the school milk program and the surplus disposal act to expire June 30.

Bills to extend both beyond the June 30 expiration date have passed the Senate. But similar proposals are tied up in a controversial House omnibus farm bill unlikely to be passed by that date.

Leaders expect the House and Senate to adopt a resolution authorizing the Agriculture Department to continue both programs pending final congressional decision on the farm measures.

Such a temporary extension would permit the department to help about 9,000 summer youth camps and child care institutions distribute milk at reduced costs and would allow the department to resume negotiations for sale of farm surpluses abroad for foreign currencies.

Adventist Leader Says Military Life Could Prove Spur

CLEVELAND (AP) — "Military life could be a spur rather than a deterrent to Christian growth if churches would begin more active campaigns" to keep contact with men in the service, a Seventh-day Adventist leader from Washington, D.C., declared Wednesday.

Pastor George W. Chambers told 1,000 delegates to the 48th quadrennial convention of Adventists that "barracks life is, unfortunately, not always the Christian life."

Every church should remember its young men in the service. They constitute a mighty evangelistic challenge," he continued.

Pastor Chambers said the 25-year-old Seventh-Day Adventist medical cadet corps training program has trained 22,000 young men since 1930. The young men enter it voluntarily and at their own expense for training in military procedures, first aid, drill and army terminology.
