Khushchev's Never-Ending Double Talk Creates Belief He's Stalling In Blitz Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of our troubles is that we can't see through Premier Khrushchev's head. He extends a friendly hand one minute, a fist the next. But we don't know what he has up his sleeve.

A great many Americans have tried to analyze the meaning of the recent on-again-off-again Soviet tactics. But this writer hasn't seen or heard of one explanation yet that looks foolproof.

It's possible the Soviets' sudden reversals in recent months — from nice to nasty to nice — are the product of simple bumbling and stumbling in foreign policy or of internal Communist party conflicts hidden from sight.

It's also possible the Soviets don't care much what they do or say from month to month so long as they keep a couple of balls in the air, make propaganda, and keep stalling on disarmament or finding ways to prevent surprise attacks.

What Khrushchev has in mind for 3, or 5, or 10 years from now for the United States is something we can only guess at. And in this contest guessing carries a chilly feeling.

Is Khrush Stalling? For, through all the shifting gears of the Kremlin one gruesome thought persists: Is Khrushchev stalling until he feels strong enough to wipe us out with a surprise attack? That's possible too.

It's almost certain neither side is going to talk seriously about disarmament, and for various reasons. One is enough: so long as both are heavily armed each has a measure of safety from attack by the other.

But how much safety from surprise attack each has is something only the top men on both sides know. It would seem to behoove this country to keep its defenses A-1 for years to come.

An individual in this country who tried to make perfect sense out of all the Soviet twists, following them down the dark alleys of the mind, could wind up in a loony bin. An example is given near the end of this story.

This year, after spending months building up propaganda for a summit meeting, or appearing to do so, Khrushchev all but knocked the idea of a summit conference out the window.

The same with the Geneva talks, where American and Communist scientists are now discussing ways to prevent cheating if there is agreement against further nuclear testing. At the last minute the Soviets seemed to be scuttling the meeting. Then they sent their scientists to Geneva.

If no inspection, what? And Khrushchev this past week, after practically torpedoing a summit conference, proposed to President Eisenhower technical talks on how to prevent surprise attacks. He failed to acknowledge that Eisenhower himself had proposed this last January.

Khrushchev knows what this country wants to prevent, surprise attack, a good inspection system. But this week Pravda, right on the heels of Khrushchev's proposal, made a joke of any inspection system.

The Communist party newspaper suggested American inspection teams, "in flying over the Soviet Union, might gather intelligence information for an American surprise attack."

If there's to be no inspection system, what's the solution? Just trust, Pravda said. That's some answer. Since there's no trust at all, both sides will remain heavily armed and capable of attack.

Which brings up a question: Why did Khrushchev mention it at all? Maybe just to keep talking.

Green District Denied Sewer Project Loan

of a heavy taxation load to pay debt service requirements and establish a debt service reserve.

Big Tax Burden Involved
Moberg says failure of the district to obtain the estimated number of starting connections or a certain percentage of anticipated would require raising a substantial amount by taxation. He says a total of $24,937 would be required to pay off the system. This is an average of $24,937 per year for the last 23 years. Based on an average of 460 connections per year for 25 years and the attendant maintenance and operation expenses, an average annual revenue of about $73 per connection would be required. And this figure leaves no allowance for depreciation.

Moberg says 25 to 30 per cent of the requirement would have to be raised annually through taxes. With only 350 connections, the estimated number when operations start, more than half the requirement would have to come from taxes collected in the face of strong local opposition.

Costs Would Be High
Finally, the acting director says the costs are very high for the type of service area involved. He says the district is composed of moderate homes, but it includes many neglected homes and undeveloped properties. He says the proposed system would cost more than $1,000 per connection. In addition, he says, the customers would be required to pay the cost of the house connections at an estimated $2 per foot and a $75 connection fee.

Moberg does not close the door completely in his notice of the HIFA refusal. He says the "need for the proposed sewer facilities is evident and, therefore, you may be assured that any new evidence received rebutting the unfavorable factors enumerated will be carefully considered." He asks for an answer before Aug. 5.
