New Looped Coat Sewing Outlined

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor
Whether you call it Empire, Directoire, or simply high-waisted, the look for fall demands a waist line located just under the bust. This trend is repeated in dresses, suits, sportswear and coats and pattern companies have been quick to present patterns in the new silhouettes.

If you're planning to sew a new coat this fall, select one of the new bubbly fabrics, which seem to go so perfectly with the Empire look. A looped shade of bright blue or green, can meet the chilliest winter winds with nary a shiver.

If you select a loopy wool fabric, local sewing center experts recommend testing the stitching on a swatch of fabric. Generally, for a heavy coating-weight cloth, you should use heavy duty thread, and a size 16 machine needle. Set your machine for 10 stitches to the inch; select a throat just slightly darker than the fabric.

A perfect coat pattern for a school miss has an Empire waistline and a flaring skirt. The wide collar may be turned up against the wind and shorter-than-wrist-length sleeves show off pretty gloves. One word of warning before cutting into your fabric: Chances are the pattern will be too long for today's leggy styles, so alter the pattern for length before cutting. In this way, you may save enough fabric for a matching hat.

NEA Details Possible Program For Talented

WASHINGTON, D. C. — School systems which put too high a premium on the "well rounded" all-American youth may be discarding some of their most gifted students. If a bright student doesn't fit into a "round mold," perhaps we should let him have a few sharp edges, says a report released by the National Education Assn.

The report details the findings of a nationwide conference on the academically talented held here last February under the chairmanship of James B. Conant, president-emeritus of Harvard University. The conference was part of an ongoing project on the gifted sponsored by the NEA and financed by the Carnegie Corp.

Answers Outlined
Though a summary of conference findings was released earlier, the complete report fulfills the promise of the 200 participants to come up with some definite answers to questions the nation has been asking about the education of high-school students of superior ability. The 160-page report is titled "The Identification and Education of the Academically Talented Student in the American Secondary School."

Designed for teachers, principals and school board members as well as lay citizens, the report delves into identification techniques and covers curriculum considerations in math, English, modern languages, science, and the social studies. It also weighs the values of different methods of organizing classes and grouping students. Such factors as motivation, guidance and cultural attitudes are also reported in detail.

In a section on identifying the gifted, the report says: "One of the current dangers of our entire educational system is the tendency to reward conformity and place a high premium on the well rounded American youth."

School Spirit Cup Is Prize At Riddle

At a recent Student Council meeting a new point system for Riddle High School was presented by student body President Norah Preston, for approval. The Council approved this system which went into effect immediately.

The point system was drawn up with the hopes that it would arouse competition between the four classes.

The operation of the point system depends entirely upon the vice presidents of the senior, junior, sophomore and freshman classes. They are Phyllis Osburn, and Mike Schofield, respectively. This point committee is headed by Marty Bonn, student body vice president.

Points will be awarded by determining the percentage of attendance of the individual classes to games, dances, and all other school functions. If a class sponsors any special activity to promote school spirit, they will receive a certain number of points. Also, the highest percentage on the honor roll will receive ten points, while the highest percentage on honorable mention will receive eight points. The highest number of points to be awarded is ten.

At the end of the school year, a trophy will be awarded to the class having the highest number of points. The class receiving this will have their graduating year engraved on the trophy and will be recognized as the most "school spirited" class for that year.

The freshman class, with 14 points, leads now. Following are the sophomores with 13, the seniors with nine, and last, the Juniors with a total of three points.

Artie was warned of the bear's presence by some Roseburg firemen hunting in the same area. The bear was following Luckett along a trail and was shot at close range. The firemen helped Artie and his step-father, Al Kosel, lug the kill about a mile until it could be hauled in a Jeep.

Roseburg High To Get Nuclear Radiation Kit

Radiological defense instrument kits will be received this month by 67 Oregon high schools for use in science classes, reports Col. Arthur M. Sheets, state civil defense director.

One of the kits will go to Roseburg High School. The distribution is being made by the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization, and is part of a nationwide program in which RDEF instrument kits will be distributed to 6,000 high schools. The instruments will serve to acquaint students with the general principles underlying radiation phenomena.

Nine Instruments Contained

Each kit contains nine instruments, two comparison standard sources for food and water, and a manual of instructions. The instruments contained in the kit are of two basic types; those which measure the rate of radiation and those which measure the total radiation accumulated. These are the instruments which would be used to measure the intensity of radioactive fallout which may be deposited on buildings, areas, equipment and persons in the wake of a nuclear attack. Each kit costs $170.53.

The equipment is being furnished free to each state under a nationwide program set up by OCDM. It is planned to supply at least one set of instruments to the 6,300 selected schools with an additional distribution planned later for other schools. An estimated 1,000,000 students will receive instruction in radiological defense by the end of the current school year.

Cooperating in the program are the U.S. Office of Education and the state department of public instruction.

District 'Make With Wool' Style Show Set Oct. 23, 25

District finals in the "Make It Yourself with Wool" home sewing contest are slated in 17 contest areas throughout the state from mid-October to the end of the month, reports Mrs. Averil Hansen, Oregon director of the national $45,000 contest.

In Douglas County, Mrs. Charles McCord of Dillard is the district director. She reports that entries will still be made through her but judging is scheduled Oct. 23 and 25. Workmanship will be judged the first day and styling the second.

Even with nearing deadlines, young seamstresses between the ages of 13 and 22 have time to revise their original entry blanks if they contact Mrs. McCord directly.

There is hardly time to follow the usual procedure of first sending the entry form to the national contest headquarters in New York and waiting receipt of the official form. Mrs. Hansen explained, "So to save time, we have made up duplicate forms which we can rush to the girls with a day's time."

Mrs. McCord may be contacted at OS 9-5318 or at Box 86, Dillard, for the forms.

Judges Named

Judging in the local contest will be done by Mrs. Carol Dawson, Douglas County home extension agent; Mrs. Jessie Reed of the Singer Sewing Machine Center; and Mrs. Ruth Wootton of Melrose. They will be the judges for both days. Judging will take place at the home extension office at the county courthouse.

Junior and senior winners on the county level will compete in November on the state level. Mrs. McCord said twice the number of entries received last year had already been received in 1958.

On the state level Mrs. Hansen said, a record number of contest entries have been received.

Young seamstresses will compete on three levels for prizes including scholarships, sewing machines and trips to Europe for top winners.

State Show Set

After the district "fashion show-off" winners will model their championship ensembles at the state-wide contest and style show at Meier and Frank Co. in Portland Nov. 15. Final step in the contest will be a major feature of the national convention of the Wool Growers' Assn.

Contestants in the contest may enter three divisions: Junior, for girls 14 through 17; senior, for girls 18 through 22; and sub-deb, for girls 13 through 16. Girls in the junior and senior division may enter a suit, coat, dress or ensemble made of wool.
