Crowded Ferry Sinks, All But Eight Rescued

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A ferryboat carrying 127 commuters across Guanabara Bay sank today in a heavy rainstorm. All but eight passengers were reported saved.
 The ferry, with a capacity of 280, sank during the morning rush hour.
 Navy launches and private craft joined in rescue operations.
 The boat went down near the end of its 20-minute run.
 The storm flooded large sections of Rio de Janeiro and cut communications.

Mrs. Glen Beach, credit manager for Miller's, and Marjorie Hodgson, credit manager for Lockwood Motors, were in Tacoma Sunday and Monday for the Pacific Northwest Council of Credit Women in conjunction with District 10, National Retail Credit Association.

Mildred Eusted and Nina Whitney, both of Creswell, and Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Insley, both of Sandy, are convention guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Adams, 377 SE Fowler. They arrived Monday and will leave tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tucker and daughter, 5½, and sons, 3 years-old and 18 months-old, have moved here from Mapleton and have purchased the true residence at Winston. Mr. Tucker is an engineer for the C and D Lumber Co. at Riddle.

Mrs. L. W. Riley and Mrs. John Doering of this city and the latter's daughter, Miss Katherine Doering of Chicago, Ill., drove to Corvallis Wednesday to attend the ceremony at which time the former's daughter, Miss Patricia Riley, junior at OSC, was taken into a national honoree.

The Class of 1939 (Roseburg High School) will hold a reunion June 27 in Roseburg. Class members still not contacted by the committee are Miles Anderson, Mary Brooks, Keith Kennedy, Clifford Neal and Helen Sebern. Anyone knowing the whereabouts of these members is asked to call Mrs. Sidney Moon Jr.

Mrs. Al H. May and Mrs. L. J. Redmond of this city were in Eugene Tuesday for the League of Women Voters convention, at which time Mrs. Paul Holmer of New York, a National Board of Directors member, was the guest speaker.

2 From Medford Have Close Call

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Theo Wenaus, a retired Medford, Ore., lumberman, and his wife had a close call when they pulled over to a curb to check a road map here Tuesday.
 A trailer overturned and dropped 20 tons of steel pipe onto the rear of their car. Wenaus, 73, and his wife, Ella, 59, were not hurt but were badly frightened.
 They were driving to Marineland, Mrs. Wenaus said that her mother and a friend had planned to accompany them but decided not to at the last minute.
 "If they had," she added, "they probably would have been killed in the back seat."

Arrest Record Revealed
 SALEM (AP) — Oregon state police arrested 3,863 persons and fined 2,118 others in April for violations of motor vehicle laws.
 There were 1,436 arrests for violating the basic speed law, 75 for drunken driving, 73 for reckless driving, and 244 for hazardous passing.

LIFE IN SCOTTSBURG gets a rollicking treatment in Gladys Workman's true story, "Only When I Laugh." Above is an illustration from the book which should establish Mrs. Workman as one of the state's top authors.

DOUGLAS LIBRARY ARRIVALS

Lower Umpqua Life Portrayed In New Gladys Workman Book

By GEORGE CASTILLO
 News-Review Assistant Editor

Gladys Workman of Scottsburg has the happy capacity of being able to laugh at her tribulations. And for Gladys, that in a sense is laughing almost all the time. Her life has been literally one illness or injury after another. Her illnesses and accidents read like a medical dictionary.
 But the optimistic view she took of life and its misfortunes has resulted in one of the finest literary efforts from a Douglas County author. She appropriately calls it "Only When I Laugh." Prentice Hall is starting publication of the book today.
 Her story of her life in the historic little town of Scottsburg is told with earthy good humor in the style of "The Egg and I."
 It tells of the rollicking adventures of a family from the big city of Los Angeles suddenly settling in the little town of Scottsburg in the Lower Umpqua River valley.

Fresh Air Needed

Gladys made up her mind that the fresh air and peace of the sparsely populated area around Scottsburg would be just the ticket to restore her husband Norman's health. Ignoring such problems as where to live and how to earn a living, she packed up husband and nephew and left for Scottsburg from Los Angeles.
 The Workmans launched their new life in a construction shack, minus doors, windows, electricity, water and "facilities." She had to cope with floods, forest fires, snakes in the kitchen, bears on the porch, her recurrent illnesses and a host of other problems not found in the city.

Her biggest problem, however, was getting to be accepted by her plain speaking neighbors. They laughed she was dangerously mad. The local people believed their suspicions of "that snooty Mrs. Workman" were confirmed when her husband revealed he had spent their life savings on six tons of alfalfa bales. The tide changed, however, as Norman helped improve the valley's alfalfa industry. This year, the Workmans' crop yielded more than a million bales.

Encouraged, Gladys continued her winning ways until she became Scottsburg's No. 1 citizen.

Characters Are Real
 In her books, she has pictured her neighbors and their activities in a warmly hilarious fashion, neither saintly nor fardish. The characters are just plain folks. What makes the book even more readable is that the characters are all real.

Being real, they have humor. One indication is Gladys' introduction of ceramics to the community. She called one woman and said "Maggie, how'd you like to take ceramics?"
 "Gee, kid," Maggie said, "I don't see why I wouldn't. I've taken Scrutan and Lydia Pinkham's and about everything else. What's ceramics good for?"

Mrs. Workman also does a masterful job of describing such institutions as the party line telephone. She calls it "unquestionably the finest tool ever perfected for human communication." Her description of the community forum which took place with every ring of the party line is hilarious.

Her warmly human story is one that indicates that neither she nor the valley will be the same again. Other new library arrivals are: Adult Non-Fiction: "The Civil War," John S. Bly; "Star Wormwood," Curtis Bok; "Experts' Book of Boating," Ruth Brindze; "Rivers, Man and Myth," Robert Brittain; "Your Gifted Child," Florence Brumbaugh; "Van Cliburn Legend," Abram Chasins; "To Appomattox," Burke Davis; "Great Oldorado," Hildegard Dolson; "Crossing of Antarctica," Sir Vivian Fuchs; "Princess of Monaco," Grant Gathier.
