OLDSMOBILE — Described as a flashing high-performance addition to the Oldsmobile line of cars for 1962 is this Starfire coupe, with its distinctive band of brush-textured anodized aluminum extending from front to rear. New models go on display Friday at Hilltop Motors. The Starfire offers the same color, trim and mechanical features as Oldsmobile's Starfire convertible. Included as standard equipment on the new 345-horsepower Starfires are front bucket seats, a sports-type power console, smoother 1962 Hydra-Matic transmission, self-adjusting power brakes and dual exhausts. Genuine leather is extensively used in the car's interior.

Higher Living Standards Possible Sans Controls Say U. S. Officials

NEW YORK (AP) — More jobs for more people—more spending money for a higher standard of living—more government spending to spur the economy's growth but without higher tax rates—more industrial output at moderately higher wage scales but at about the same price levels. And all this without triggering a boom and bust or an unwelcome spurt in the cost of living that could be curbed only by federal controls over prices and wages and production. Is it possible? Administration economists say we can achieve the goal with judicious government monetary action and proper labor and management restraint.

Critics of the administration policy call it excessive, unjustified by present conditions, and unlikely to succeed, judged by past experiences. This dispute cuts deeper than today's headlined trading of jobs over whether steel companies can hold the price line or how high auto wages can go without setting a wage-price hiking pattern for other industries. More basic is whether the economy is growing fast enough, whether unemployment can be licked, whether the government can intervene without its pumping setting off another round of inflation.

President Kennedy and his Council of Economic Advisors say the economy must grow faster if jobs are to be found for an increasing labor force. Walter Heller, chairman of the council, says that at the start of the year industry had the capacity to produce 8 per cent more than it actually did. He holds that the gap was due to a failure of demand for goods and services. He urges this demand be stimulated by a combination of easy money and greater government spending or, if that isn't enough, by lower taxes. Mechanized factories with more efficient production methods would be expected to absorb moderate wage rises without increasing prices. And increased demand, even at present profit margins, would be counted upon to keep total earnings high enough. Opponents challenge this. They deny that the economy is really stagnant. They contend that further government pump priming on
