Big Chinese Family Departs For U. S.

HONG KONG (AP)—A family of nine Chinese refugees left Monday night for Washington, D.C., the largest group so far to be granted entry to the United States under President Kennedy's emergency program.

Chang Sin, 36, his wife, their six daughters and one son will join his mother, Anna Wang in Washington. She is a cook in a restaurant.

The family escaped to Macao four years ago aboard a smuggler motor junk. Another smuggler junk brought them to Hong Kong from the Portuguese colony.

A native of Shanghai, Chang worked for the U.S. Army advisory group in Nanking before the Communists conquered the mainland.

Iron Workers Session Brings No Decisions

PORTLAND (AP)—A second negotiating session is scheduled Friday between contractors, representatives of the Iron Workers Union and federal mediator George Walker.

Details of an all-day session Monday were not announced. It was the first meeting since the strike began May 28.

At that time, the union announced it would post pickets only at projects where employers hired others to do the iron workers jobs.

Pickets stopped construction last week on the 16-story Standard Plaza in Portland and the Medford-North Ashland interchange.

John O'Halloran, union business agent, said employers had attempted to replace the iron workers.

Union negotiators have meetings scheduled in Seattle with Washington employers today and Wednesday.

Estes Takes $190,000 Loss In Venture Into Journalism

PEGOS, Tex. (UPI)—Financial wizard Billie Sol Estes took a $190,000 loss in his venture into the journalistic field.

Estes' share of the Pecos Daily News sold for $2,250 Monday. Harry Moore, El Paso, receiver for Estes' crumbled fortune, said the West Texas farm tycoon had invested $199,415 in the newspaper that must be written off as a loss.

Twelve Pecos businessmen headed by two Pecos certified public accountants bought Estes' share in the newspaper. Attorney Jim Tomlin represents the group which also agreed to pay off a $2,700 loan to the paper by Moore.

Another Estes enterprise, the Fort Stockton Implement Co., drew three bids which will be evaluated for several days, Moore said.

Tomlin said the daily newspaper will continue publication. The $2,700 loan had permitted the paper to keep going since the collapse of the Estes farm empire.

"The people are interested in keeping it (The News) alive as a daily newspaper," Tomlin said. "There was no other reason (to buy it) except for the purpose of keeping it going."

The purchase price represented $100 per share for each of the 92 1/2 shares owned by Estes in the newspaper, which began publishing less than a year ago.

Judge R. E. Thomson had ordered sale of the newspaper and farm implement company, the first of Estes' many enterprises to be sold since he underwent voluntary receivership.

Doukhorob Ladies Set More Blazes

NELSON, B.C. (UPI)—Hymn-singing Doukhorob women Monday set fire to nine more homes in Krestova and Claybrick, B.C.

The fires brought to more than 75 the number of dwellings destroyed since Friday throughout the Kootenay area. Many other buildings including barns and tool sheds also have been put to the torch.

In Grandfork, B.C., 13 Freedomite women, accused of arson in connection with the partial burning of Orthodox Doukhorob leader John Vorigin's home, were remanded in custody for high court trial.

In New Westminster, 70 Sons Freedom leaders were called before a preliminary hearing into charges of conspiring to intimidate Parliament and the British Columbia legislature.

The Doukhorob came to Canada at the turn of the century to escape religious persecution in Russia. They are an offshoot of the Russian church who have no faith in civil laws and resort to acts of violence to show their displeasure at civil restrictions.

Firemen report that at 5:52 p.m. they were called to the mill site near the Purina feed store where workmen are tearing down the mill. Sparks from a cutting torch set the sawdust afire, firemen said.

There was no damage. One piece of equipment was sent to the fire and 14 firemen responded to the alarm.

Bonneville's Power Loss $32 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Bonneville Power Administrator Charles F. Luce Monday renewed his oft-repeated plea to Congress: Prevent electric power worth millions of dollars from flowing unused to the sea.

Luce appeared before the House Reclamation subcommittee in support of legislation intended to pave the way for a 1,000-mile transmission line to connect Bonneville Power Administration with California's federal power system.

The legislation, introduced by Reps. Julia Butler Hansen, D-Wash., and Gracie Pflast, D-Idaho, would give Pacific Northwest power consumers—including private industry—first class on electricity produced in the area.

The legislation was introduced to allay fears in the Pacific Northwest that firm power would be drained off to serve federal preference customers in California.

$32 Million Lost

Luce said power worth up to $32 million a year was being wasted because it is secondary power without a market in the Pacific Northwest.

"We're exporting it to the ocean," he said, "and we're not getting paid for it."

Seattle attorney Gordon C. Culp supported the legislation in behalf of both private and public utilities in the region. Culp said there has been "the utmost cooperation" between the BPA and private industry in seeking "to squeeze the last kilowatt out of the rivers."

But Pennsylvania Rep. John P. Saylor, ranking Republican member of the Interior Committee, and Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Calif., remained unimpressed.

Saylor, terming the BPA a "monster," said Luce would some day "come before the committee to ask for authority to build steampower facilities to compete with private industry."

"How naive can you people in the Pacific Northwest get?" he asked Culp.

Saylor and Hosmer spent nearly two hours in questioning Luce in seeking to prove that the intertie was not needed.

Their questioning included an attempt to show that the so-called "dump" power could be sold in the Pacific Northwest without the proposed interconnection with California.

Luce, who remained outwardly unflustered, answered that the secondary power—available during periods of good streamflow—could profitably be sold to utilities which use steampower generation. Such utilities can shut down their generators and buy cheap "dump" power when it is available.

But, Luce explained, the lack of adequate gas and oil resources in the area meant that hydroelectric power was the most economical. Thus, he said, the area had few utilities which used steam generation.

Stock Market Resumes Dip

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market resumed its sharp slump in active trading today.

Again only the gold stocks countered the trend and moved on the down-grade were steels, motors, oils, chemicals, electrical equipments, tobaccos, airlines, electronics and building materials.

Losses of key stocks ranged from a few cents to $1 or $2.

At noon, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 7.95 to 587.22.

Volume in the first two hours of trading totaled 1.56 million shares against 960,000 in the like period Monday.

There were no particular economic or political developments to affect the general list.

The golds showed traditional strength in a declining market and were helped by President Kennedy's conference with business and government leaders on the outflow of gold.

Jury Action Near In Portland Trial

PORTLAND (AP)—Final arguments will be heard today in the first degree murder trial of Richard B. Schwensen before the case is given to the jury.

Schwensen is charged in the death of Mrs. Jean R. Bussey, 29, a Portland housewife whose body was found in a car parked in September.

An autopsy report said she died after an air bubble entered her bloodstream. The state charges the bubble entered through an abdominal wound suffered during sexual relations with Schwensen.

The defense has disputed the autopsy report, with two pathologists testifying they found no evidence that death was due to air embolism.

Testimony lasted for eight days, but Schwensen was not asked to take the stand in his own defense.

U. S. Sets Off A-Blast, 18th In Pacific Series

Today's blast, like nearly all of those so far, was produced by a device dropped from an airplane near Christmas Island.

Conditions Bad For Strippers, Say Witnesses

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Actress Penny Singleton and songstress Pat Lynn Hackett told Congress today that their entertainers union permits exotic dancers and strippers to work under degrading conditions in bars and night clubs.

Many of these entertainment spots, Miss Singleton charged, are dominated by racketeers.

The two appeared before a standing room only audience of Sen. John L. McClellan's Senate rackets subcommittee. It is investigating charges that some leaders of the American Guild of Variety Artists have cooperated with hoodlum-controlled clubs, burlesque houses and other night spots.

Miss Singleton, who starred in the role of "Blondie" on television and in the movies, delivered a bitter attack on AGVA's leadership. She once was its president.

Outcasts of Union

"I charge here and now that the exotic and strip artists have been abandoned and made outcasts by the very union to which they pay dues for representation and protection," she said.

Miss Singleton was followed by Miss Hackett, of Philadelphia, who denounced working conditions in the Philadelphia area as disgusting and degrading.

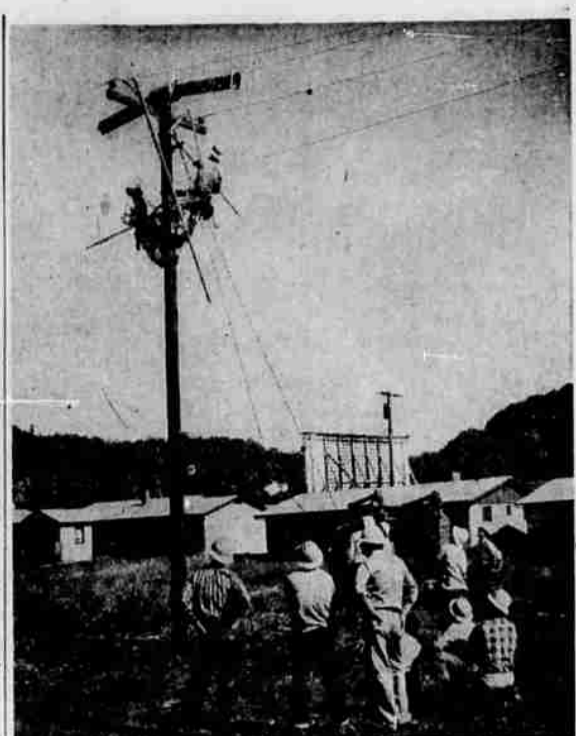

She said the first thing her new boss at the Bon Bon Supper Club asked when she came to work was, "Can you drink? Can you drink champagne? How much can you drink?"

Then, she related, he told her, "Of course you don't have to worry because the drinks aren't legitimate anyway." She described the "champagne" as either being watered down or consisting of plain water or wine.

Miss Hackett, whose right leg was severed below the knee in an auto accident, told McClellan "you are required" to solicit customers for drinks in three or four of the Philadelphia clubs where she worked.

McClellan asked whether AGVA representatives in the area did anything to expose and correct the conditions Miss Hackett described. She replied, "They don't do a thing."

Much of the testimony centered around the jobs of B-girls. McClellan asked Miss Singleton to define these bar-girls, and she said they are persons who solicited drinks for a commission.

10,000-Volt Safety Device 'Hot Stick' Shown Douglas Electric Pole Line Men

The Douglas Electric Cooperative, Inc., 1981 NE Stephens St., hosted 35 members of pole line crews at a training session, which started Monday and is continuing today.

The annual "hot stick" school is a very important part of a line-man's technical training, said Harold Backen, Jr., manager of the local cooperative.

As the name implies, hot sticks are devices six to eight feet in length, he explained. They are insulated to withstand voltages up to 10,000 volts per inch.

Backen said that as our electrical systems become heavily loaded it is more and more necessary to maintain the electrical conductors and other devices while the line are energized. With the aid of these tools the linemen with intensified training is able to work atop the poles on the energized conductors and maintain safe working clearance.

The school is sponsored by the safety and job training section of Ruralite Services, Inc., Portland. The safety section is under the direction of Jack Davidson. He states there are 35 consumer-owned member utilities in Oregon, Washington and Idaho who regularly participate in their Safety and Job Training program.

The two-day sessions held in Douglas Electric's yard was attended by men from 12 utilities in the state. Davidson also reports the attendance was beyond their expectations and participation was excellent.

Cherry Fruit Fly Threatens Crops

Cherry growers in Douglas County were advised today they should start control measures immediately against the cherry fruit fly.

"The first flies began to emerge June 10 and will begin laying eggs in the developing cherries by the end of the week," warned J. Roland Parker, county extension agent.

Control measures are successful only when the flies are destroyed before egg laying starts. Dust or sprays applied as soon as flies begin to emerge and repeat at 10-day intervals until harvest is recommended control procedure, said the agent.

Several insecticides when applied at the proper time are effective. For the back-yard cherry tree owner or growers producing fruit for the fresh market, Perthane is recommended. Perthane can be used up to two days before harvest and leaves very little residue.

The agent said one quart Perthane emulsifiable concentrate containing four pounds of active ingredients per gallon in 100 gallons of water should be used. Where smaller quantities of spray are required, use one pint to 50 gallons of water, one cup to 25 gallons of water and one-half cup to 12 gallons of water, Parker advised.

Commercial cherry growers selling fruit to processors may use Perthane or several other insecticides as dusts or sprays. For a dust program, 5 per cent Methoxychlor dust at 50 pounds per acre or 10 per cent Sevin dust at 50 pounds per acre is recommended. Either may be used up to one day before harvest.

For spray program, two pounds of 50 per cent Methoxychlor wettable powder to 100 gallons of water may be used to within seven days of harvest, or two pounds of 50 per cent Sevin wettable powder, or its equivalent in other formulations per 100 gallons of water may be used to one day of harvest.

Sprays should be applied to give good coverage to foliage of the cherry trees, and trees and shrubbery adjacent to the cherry trees should also be sprayed as the flies often light in such areas prior to egg laying.
