Reindeer Meat Production Reported High In Alaska

WASHINGTON (UPI)—There was more reindeer meat produced in Alaska in 1961 than beef and pork combined, according to the Agriculture Department's Statistical Reporting Service.

Reindeer meat, produced on Nunivak Island off the west coast of Alaska, totaled 485,000 pounds last year. Beef production in the new state totaled 309,000 pounds, while pork production was 135,000 pounds.

The total value of farm production in Alaska last year was estimated at $5,703,000. About 25 per cent of this was used by farm families. Milk represented 43 per cent of the value of Alaska's farm production, potatoes 14 per cent, and eggs 8 per cent.

Refrigerated food stocks in warehouses totaled 4.9 billion pounds on June 1, the largest

SP Talks Merger With Rock Island

CHICAGO (AP)—The president of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad said Tuesday that talks regarding a possible merger have been under way for nearly a week.

R. Ellis Johnson, head of the Rock Island, said officials of the two carriers "have been exploring the possibility of a merger."

"These exploratory discussions entail inspection and review of the physical properties and operations of both companies," Johnson said.

He added the talks have been going on for the last four or five days.

Merger of the two lines, which together serve central, southern and western sections of the country, would create a single system of some 20,000 miles of track, one of the largest in the nation.

The Rock Island lines extend generally west and south from Chicago, but also serve some communities in Minnesota and South Dakota. The Southern Pacific serves major cities in California and operates southeastward to New Orleans.

The Rock Island uses tracks of the Southern Pacific west of Tumacac, N. M., to reach the West Coast.

ever for the date, according to the department.

These stocks included: Frozen orange concentrate, 30 million gallons; frozen turkeys, 131 million pounds; frozen fruit stocks, 308 million pounds; frozen vegetable stocks, 874 million pounds; butter, 385 million pounds; American cheese, 415 million pounds; shell eggs, 325,000 cases; frozen egg stocks, 88 million pounds; red meat, 583 million pounds.

The red meat supplies were 11 per cent larger than a year earlier and 5 per cent above the June 1 average. The increase in red meat supplies over a year earlier resulted primarily from larger holdings of pork, which were 26 per cent larger than on June 1, 1961, and 7 per cent above average.

The Department of Economic Research (ERS) said that at almost the same time the Soviet government was raising domestic meat prices by 30 per cent, reflecting a shortage, it agreed to increase its shipments of canned meat and other foods to Cuba during 1962.

On May 16 the Havana newspaper "Revolucion" announced an extension of a January agreement between Cuba and the Soviet Union calling for increased shipments of food, machinery and fertilizer to Cuba before the end of the year. The increase would bring 1962 shipments to a level about 40 per cent above 1961.

The May agreement calls for 20 million cans of meat to be supplied by the Soviet Union to Cuba, in addition to 6,200 tons of canned meat specified in the January agreement. Weight of the cans was not specified. In 1958, Cubans consumed 272,000 metric tons of meat, about 85 pounds per person. U. S. consumption is about 160 pounds per person.

The extension included several food items not mentioned in the January agreement, including canned fish, rice, whole and dehydrated potatoes, and 2,000 tons of baby food. Additional shipments of wheat flour, corn, barley, beans and condensed milk were provided for in the extension.

The Soviets agreed to provide trucks, tractors, ships, agricultural equipment including airplanes for crop spraying, petroleum products, fertilizer, steels, and other metal products, including complete factories.

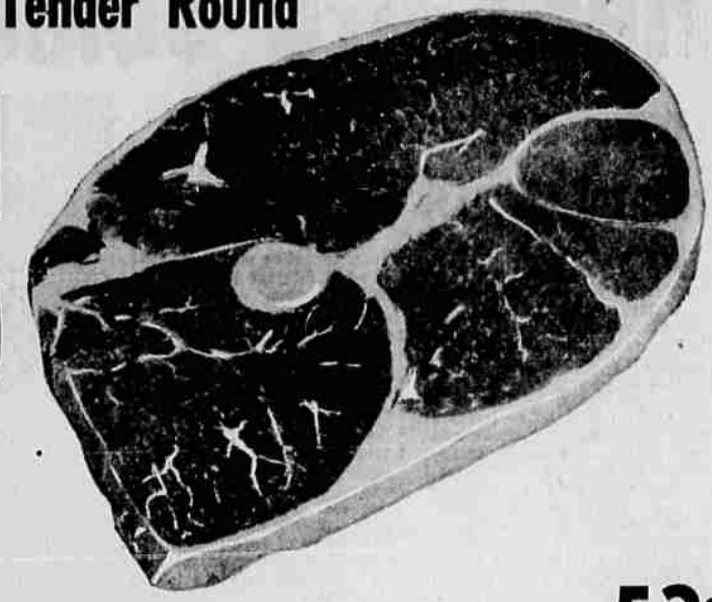

Cuba would pay the Soviet government with sugar, coffee, tobacco, fruit, and metal ores.
