

SPECIAL RECOGNITION on the state level will soon be given the Winston Christian Church. An award will be presented by the Oregon Christian Missionary Society to the church for being selected "Rural Church of the Year." The announcement was made at the state convention of Oregon Christian Churches at Turner. The award is made annually to the outstanding rural church. The Winston church was cited for its "outstanding work and the fine leadership given you through your minister, Ralph Helseth." Helseth is shown here in front of the church he has led for the past year. Three youths from the congregation have been ordained and two more are presently in training. (News-Review Photo).

Camp Withycombe Leader Suspended Pending Probe

SALEM (UPI) — Oregon Adjutant General Paul Kliever late Friday announced the suspension of Lt. Col. James J. Anderson as post commander of Camp Withycombe "pending completion of an investigation concerning irregularities in the handling of state property."

Soblen's Lawyers Mapping Strategy

LONDON (UPI) — Dr. Robert A. Soblen's lawyers today were mapping strategy for the legal battle to block his return to the United States where he faces a life sentence for spying for Russia during World War II. The 62-year-old Lithuanian-born psychiatrist appealed Friday for political asylum after his lawyers succeeded in obtaining a writ of habeas corpus. A home office spokesman said the plea for asylum "was under consideration."

The state police and Clackamas County district attorney are probing the disappearance of about 16,000 worth of surplus property at the Oregon National Guard camp, in Clackamas County. Kliever said that Col. Bill Chapman, depot superintendent at Portland International Airport, was appointed to take over as commander of Camp Withycombe as an added duty "until such time as the investigation is completed."

The irregularities started to unfold last month, but details of an investigation ordered by Gov. Mark Hatfield remained secret. State audits supervisor Douglas F. Decew said the irregularities were discovered during a routine audit covering the year 1961. Hatfield directed state police to make an investigation and asked the Clackamas County district attorney to join in the probe and to take "appropriate action." The missing items involve equipment and household goods that became surplus when the Navy closed down its Tongue Point station at Astoria last year.

Iron Workers Strike Factions Draw Criticism From Governor

SALEM, Ore. (UPI)—Gov. Mark Hatfield, in strongly worded, identical telegrams, late Friday criticized both management and labor for their inability to settle the prolonged ironworkers' strike.

The six-week-old dispute has tied up millions of dollars worth of projects in Oregon and Southwest Washington. Hatfield said that thousands of persons idled in related industries are "innocent victims" of the deadlock and "their suffering is at the breaking point." He challenged representatives of the ironworkers union and Associated General Contractors to resume negotiations and stay in session until a settlement is reached. "Again my office is available for whatever purpose it may serve," he said. "No one responsible for this stoppage deserves to sleep while others suffer."

The telegrams went to John O'Halloran, business representative of the ironworkers in Portland, and to William Harding, of the AGC in Portland. "The people of Oregon have shown some tolerance and patience as the process of collective bargaining has run its normal course and broken down," Hatfield said. "It is inconceivable that either side would refuse to meet with federal negotiators to continue deliberations which mean so much to so many citizens throughout this area. This is no time for prejudices, pettiness and personalities to block attempts to reach an agreement," he said. "I appeal to responsible leadership and interested citizens to persuade the parties concerned to resume negotiations and stay in session until a settlement is reached." Hatfield said. A spokesman for Associated General Contractors said the organization was in "full agreement" with the governor. A. H. Harding, Portland, said the employer group's negotiating committee has "been standing by since Tuesday, July 3, waiting to meet day or night." Harding said the AGC has asked "not once, but several times" the to "use their influence in getting Secretary Goldberg to intercede."

SCHEDULED TO DIE

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Russian who stabbed a militiaman but did not kill him has been sentenced to die before a firing squad, according to Moscow Radio. The radio said Friday the stabbing occurred during a dance in Smolensk, but did not give any further details.

Estes Probe Needs A Tale Only Marshall Could Tell

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dead men tell no tales, in the words of the old truism, and the Senate's Billie Sol Estes inquiry had reason to regret it today.

Needed is the tale that could be told by the late Henry H. Marshall, former cotton program specialist for the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) office in Texas. It was Marshall whose June, 1961 death from gunshot wounds in Texas was first ruled a suicide. Recently, as a result of the Estes case, the finding was reviewed by a grand jury which failed to reach a decision.

Passed Certain Regulations The Senate investigations subcommittee was told Friday that county ASC committees in Reeves and Pecos counties, Tex., bypassed certain Agriculture Department regulations in transactions involving Estes, transactions later ruled illegal by the department.

Police Get Break In Kidnap-Slaying

TORRANCE, Calif. (UPI)— Police laboratory technicians today worked on the first "major break" in the kidnap slaying of 11-year-old Dorothy Gale Brown, a white candy-striped dress and pink hair ribbon. The apparel was discovered inside a beer can floating off Huntington Beach by the daughter of Mrs. Richard Shanklin. The woman washed the dress before she heard of the Brown slaying. But officers said it may be possible to get fingerprints from the hair band.

The nude body of the child who never returned from a bicycle ride Tuesday was discovered the following day in the ocean off Corona Del Mar, Calif. The beach is about 30 miles south of her home here. "We have felt all long that the recovery of Dorothy Gale's attire, or any portion of it, would help immeasurably in tracing the slayer," said Police Chief Percy G. Bennett.

The dress was in perfect condition. Its four buttons were intact. But police have failed to find the child's underclothing. Police, going on the assumption that the child was kidnaped and then slain, theorize that the body may have been dumped from a boat. But officers are more prone to think an automobile was used. "We believe the kidnaper drove the little girl to Corona Del Mar, dumped her body in the ocean and then drove north," said Bennett. The killer probably disposed of the clothing during several stops along the highway, he added.
