Kennedy Said Leaning More Toward Tax Cut This Year

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Hubert H. Humphrey said today President Kennedy was leaning more toward an income tax cut this year, rather than waiting until 1963.

The Minnesota Democrat said the administration wanted to wait about a month more before making a final decision on the reduction.

Other developments: AID—Speaker John W. McCormack said he was confident the House would restore to the foreign aid bill the President's discretionary authority to provide aid to Communist countries that show signs of independence from Moscow.

Damage Noted In School Entry

A break-in at Joseph Lane Junior High School over the weekend was apparently undertaken for the sake of mischief.

The Douglas County Sheriff's Department said vandalism was extensive. Robert Mounst, principal, told deputies the school was entered sometime between 2 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Windows Broken—Two windows in the school were broken out indicating possible points of entry. About 10 school rooms and the central office were entered.

School rooms were ransacked and obscenities written on several walls. In some classrooms ink had been spilled, and room materials scattered about in what appeared to be a deliberate attempt at mischief, deputies reported.

An attempt to remove a window from its casing at the central office resulted in breakage of the glass.

A custodial cart loaded heavy with books, papers, phonograph records, model planes and ships, maps, mathematics devices and other educational materials was taken out of the building through the north door.

Deputies said the cart was left intact on the walkway just a few feet from the door, indicating the vandals were frightened away. Officers said it was indicated two or more juveniles were involved.

The Sheriff's Department said this was the second break-in at the school during the past week. Last Thursday an entry was made to the school's central office and 40 cents was taken but no vandalism occurred. It was not determined how entry to the school was accomplished in that break-in.

Scientists Indicate New Blast Imminent At Christmas Island

HONOLULU (UPI)—Officials of U.S. Task Force 8, basing in the rosy glow of their record 400-mile high hydrogen blast over Johnston Island, indicated today that another detonation in the current Pacific test series is imminent at Christmas Island.

There was no official announcement, but the Federal Aviation Authority advised airmen to stay clear of the Christmas Island area effective 11 o'clock HST Monday night (5 a.m. EDT Tuesday).

Sunday night's rocket-borne shot over Johnston Island, with power estimated at five million tons or more of TNT, apparently was detonated at a record 400 miles in space.

The estimate was made by scientists who witnessed the huge fireball from atop 10,000-foot Mt. Haleakala on the Hawaiian island of Maui, 750 miles northeast of Johnston.

Splash of Colors—The high altitude blast created a brilliant splash of colors visible from Hawaii to New Zealand, a distance of 3,500 miles. It temporarily blacked out trans-Pacific communications.

However, there was some speculation as to whether the test could be classified as either a failure or a success in one sense. It was designed to knock out trans-Pacific communications for an extended period—and some British scientists had forecast permanent disruption. Communications

Accident Victims Show Improvement

The two women hurt in the grinding crash of an automobile with a rock bluff at the junction of Little River Rd. and North Umpqua Highway Sunday are responding to treatment, their physician reported today.

Mrs. William (Ethyl) Rutter, 71, is in critical condition, primarily because of blood loss, but she has shown some response to treatment. She is also being treated for leg fractures.

Mrs. Peter (LaVera) Rutter, 45, daughter-in-law of the elder Mrs. Rutter, was described as in satisfactory condition today. Surgery was performed on her Monday. The doctor said she had received fractures of the right wrist, two broken legs and multiple contusions.

The husbands of both women were killed in the accident in which the driver of the car tried to make a turn at high speed in order to avoid a collision with an oncoming car. (See story page 2.)

Oregon Women Fliers Finish Powder Derby

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI)—A pair of Oregon fliers were 14th to cross the finish line Monday in the Women's Powder Puff Derby.

Evelyn Rackerell of Lebanon, Ore., and her copilot, Marcella Othus, were in the 14th plane to land here. Thirty-six of the 49 planes competing in the cross-country flight had landed by nightfall.

The remaining planes in the competition, which permits flying only in daylight, were expected today. The race, which started in Oakland, Calif., last Saturday, is judged by time, determined on a handicap system.

The winner, to be determined by a complicated scoring system, will be announced later this week.

the Agency for International Development, said he visited Hong Kong during May and that no known food need among the refugees was going unmet.

MEDICARE—Sen. Edward Long, D-Mo., told the Senate that a compromise old age health care bill was the "only constructive way" to meet the problem.

tions were rerouted extensively in anticipation of the blackout, but everything apparently was operating normally less than 18 hours after the blast.

The high altitude shot was successful in touching off verbal reactions from throughout the world. There were no official announcements from either the Eastern or Western countries in Europe. However, reaction ranged from violent denunciations by the Communist West to expressions of regret in the West that Russian tests had made it necessary.

West German sources in Bonn said the test was undoubtedly in the interest of common Western defense preparedness.

Moscow Radio denounced the blast as a "crime" committed by "American atom-mongers."

Scientists and newspapers in Japan—the only nation ever to suffer nuclear attack—denounced the test as a "barbaric act."

"Hell bomb ranges in paradise," screamed the headline streamer over an editorial in the Sankei Shimbun, the first Japanese newspaper to publish an editorial on the test. "We protest many times against the injustice of the United States."

Studies to be carried out are of the behavior of juvenile salmonids in reservoirs.

Oil Exploration Ires Fishermen

ASTORIA (UPI)—Oregon fishermen declared here Monday night that oil exploration blasts may be heavily damaging fish life. They criticized the Oregon Fish Commission for inadequate research and policing.

The commission replied it will increase its research operations. A spokesman for Shell Oil pledged cooperation and a share in the cost.

The exchange came at a hearing to air fishermen's complaints that explosives used to map the ocean floor off Oregon were killing fish. The oil explorations started last year.

A series of fishermen testified. They said they were particularly concerned with what is believed to be a layer of partly fresh water 12 to 36 feet below the surface containing plankton on which young fish feed.

They said more research is needed to determine the harm caused by blasts at this level.

Robert Rulison, attending for the fish commission, said the agency will try to work out new experiments, using midwater trawls and plankton nets, to research the explosion areas.

He said the Oregon State research boat Acana also would make studies off the mouth of the Columbia this summer.

The fishermen said they were unimpressed by evidence that the blasts do not have any effect below 180 feet.

They also were unimpressed by testimony that blasts have caused no damage in the Gulf of Mexico for 20 years.

The fishermen asked for a special investigation boat to follow the Shell vessel, in addition to a fish commission inspector who now travels aboard the Shell boat.

Everett McCracken, a Shell engineer, agreed to make daily radio broadcasts of the blast locations.

Dr. Anderson said since the raid the camps, near here, have been cleaned up on the basis of recommendations made by two health officers. He described them as adequate "from the sanitary standpoint but not from the aesthetic standpoint."
