Rotary's New Chief Sees Retirement Hopes Fade

By THE WASHINGTON STAFF
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Nitish C. Laharry of Calcutta, India, who was received by President Kennedy at the White House, is something more than the proverbial "one man in a million." He is the first Asian to be elected president of Rotary International.

"After living out of suitcases all over Southeast Asia as a motion picture distributor for 34 years, I decided to retire," he says. "And look what happens. A nominating committee of 11 Rotarians pick me to be president — out of two billion people in Asia."

One man who feels he should answer the phone by saying "you've got the wrong number," instead of saying "hello," is Robert Dillon, a Treasury Department official. Daily he gets calls from people who, entering the building and seeing his name in the department directory, call thinking he is his boss, Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon.

Gov. Michael V. DiSalle of Ohio, Democrat, was among governors who recently paid a mass visit to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower at his Gettysburg farm.

The general told DiSalle his cattle had just won two blue ribbons.

"Republican judges, no doubt," cracked the governor.

"No, Argentinians," replied Ike.

Washington newsmen provided a couple of follow-ups to Eisenhower's recent comment, that if the Democrat's farm bill had passed he was afraid he'd wind up in jail for noncompliance.

One reporter, riding a shuttle bus up the driveway of Ike's Gettysburg farm, noticed that the general's corn didn't look too robust for early July.

"Was he willing to go to jail for THAT?" asked the reporter credulously.

And another reporter cracked, "I didn't see any of the prize bulls that were given the general while he was president, but there were an awful lot of Republican sacred cows around the farm."

Rep. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., says that "the way lobbyists have been acting on the sugar bill, the old saying of 'Where the sugar is flies gather' needs to be updated. It should read, 'Where the sugar is the lobbyists gather.' "

Newspaper Advertising Executives Association President J. Warren McClure, who hails from Burlington, Vt., says that "Down East we're no longer concerned about a third presidential term in Washington. What we're worried about is the third brother."

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., enjoyed Otto Preminger's treatment of Allen Drury's novel "Advise and Consent" immensely. The senator explains that the story is "in no sense an attempt to say flatly, 'This is the Senate, this is how it operates' any more than by opening day baseball toss by the President represents major league pitching.

" 'Advise and Consent' is fictional entertainment with a touch of reality," Mundt declares. "The United States Senate is a lot of reality with a touch of entertainment."

U.S. Chamber of Commerce President Ladd Plumley is a New Englander so conservative that, even in Washington's most humid midsummer weather, he always wears a vest.

"It's a good bit like the job of being chamber president," he says. "After a while, you get used to the heat."
