New Game Of Chicken Plagues Plane Pilots

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — A new kind of "chicken" game by local teen-agers has made West Coast Air Lines pilots afraid to touch down on the Twin Falls Airport.

The youths lie down in lines at the runway approach at the spot they think the plane's wheels will touch down. When the plane comes in for a landing, the first youth to jump up is considered "chicken."

So far no one has been injured. R.B. Masoner, resident manager of West Coast here, said 20 youths were lined up in their game Wednesday night. He said the runway has to be patrolled nightly now before the 12:30 a.m. flight, to be sure there are no teen-agers on the runway.
