

Far-Out Designer Is Helping To Put Millinery On Heads Of Hatless Women

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Miss Jimmi York is a far-out fur hat designer helping to put millinery on the heads of women gone hatless for years.

"I'm just trying to revolutionize the millinery industry, that's all," said the designer-manufacturer, a newcomer to the field. "Most milliners are still making hats to go to church, that's why the industry's sick."

"Yet today, I'm told, 75 percent of women's apparel is in the sports and casual wear categories. In there somewhere, there has to be a place for a hat."

"In short, I'm designing hats for women who don't wear hats." She figures these are the chic young dressers between the ages of 18 and 35 to 40.

New Use For Furs
Miss York, a tall, smart-looking brunette born 34 years ago in Welch, W. Va., got into millinery because "I saw all those hundreds and hundreds of fur coats just sitting in that basement going to waste."

Her working world already was fashion. She had designed shoes for a firm operating chain of stores, and was working as an advertising copywriter for a New York specialty store.

Her job took her into the wholesale clothing market constantly, and it was thus that one day a furrier showed her a supply of raccoon, fox and opossum coats he couldn't sell.

She'd had a hunch that fur hats would fly high in fashion and there would be big demand for any that could be sold at medium instead of sky-high prices. The old coats offered the answer.

Spaceman's Watchband— Way-Out Fashion Note

BY THE WASHINGTON STAFF
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — This new space-age fashion note came to the fore when President Kennedy made the 1962 Collier trophy award for outstanding achievements in aviation to four X-15 pilots.

Any astronaut who wants to be in high style must wear a foot-and-a-half-long band on his electronic wrist watch. It takes a strap this length to wrap around the bulky space suit sleeves.

Most notable understatement of the week is credited to Attorney General Robert F. (Bobby) Kennedy.

"I'm not going to take an active part in the campaign," he told a group of Democratic congressional candidates at a breakfast rally.

"The President has taken me out of politics because of the kind of work I do."

Soon to be sworn in as new secretary of health, education and welfare, Anthony J. Celebrezze, mayor of Cleveland, has another claim to fame that will make him unique in Washington.

"I was perhaps the greatest gandy dancer ever, at the age of 14," he recently told the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers convention. He explained that his father was a railroad worker, working on the tracks as a laborer. In his summer vacations, the new cabinet member worked right beside him. In railroad slang, track workers are known as "gandy dancers."

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., says

that following swearing-in ceremonies for Joseph H. Bottom as successor to the late senator from South Dakota Francis Case, Vice President Johnson ushered them both along to his ceremonial office for photos, since picture taking is forbidden on the Senate floor.

Having to go through the ceremony the second time, the vice president quipped:

"I certainly hope this isn't an omen of what's to come — all I've been swearing in this year have been Republicans."

Democratic National Committee Chairman John M. Bailey opened the second Democratic Candidates' Conference with the comment:

"I think it fitting that the so-called all-Republican conference was held in a circus tent in General Eisenhower's cow pasture. Goldwater didn't attend, neither did Rockefeller. And neither did Romney."

"So the only entertainment was furnished by the Ev and Charlie show. Ev and Charlie didn't want to attend either, but they arrived at the last minute, arms slightly twisted."

President Kennedy's top economic adviser now has a little set introduction which he makes at the beginning of his talks to various groups on the business situation.

"I'm Walter W. Heller," he says. "not William E. Heller, and I did not lend $7 million to Billie Sol Estes. I'm not that good a credit risk."

A new term on Capitol Hill is "hopper dropper." It's applied by unadmirable colleagues to a congressman who submits bills (drops bills in the hopper) at the slightest provocation in order to get publicity, then promptly forgets all about them.

Silk Stocking Bandit Holds Up Salem Motel

SALEM (UPI) — A gunman wearing a woman's stocking over his face robbed the Marion Motor Hotel of $714 here Tuesday.

The night clerk, Darius S. Orton, 68, said the robbery occurred even as a policeman was phoning the hotel to seek information about an earlier theft in the hotel. Orton said a gun was pointed at him at the time.
