

Kremlin Policy May Get Tougher After Forthcoming Moscow Meet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. authorities said today Russia's internal and foreign policies may well turn tougher after the forthcoming Moscow session of the Communist party Central Committee.

The meeting, beginning May 28, is to deal with ideological problems. It is expected to ratify Premier Nikita Khrushchev's recent crackdown on the revolt of the intellectuals in the Soviet Union.

There also are signs, Russian affairs experts said, that a general tightening of internal controls will be ordered, although there is no prospect of a return to anything even approaching the terror of Stalin's time.

Aggressive Diplomatic Offensive
On the international front, Russia's diplomatic offensive on Berlin and other issues may become more aggressive, these experts said, depending on two factors:

—The outcome of the current policy reappraisal which obviously is going on in the Kremlin.
—Developments in the Sino-Soviet feud, which may be tackled at a May 15 Moscow meeting that Russia has suggested. There has been no public disclosure of whether Red China has accepted the invitation to meet at that time to talk over differences. The impression here is that she has or will.

Support Co-Existence
Other members of the Presidential House committee heard Khrushchev's co-existence policy as opposed to Red China's demand for more militant action. However, the view of many U.S. experts is that the Kremlin still within the co-existence framework.

may resume a more aggressive approach to East-West problems to stop the erosion of its influence within Communist parties elsewhere in the world.

It is believed that Moscow's major concern in the dispute with Red China revolves around the fact that Peking's hard line is gaining favor with Communists in Latin America and other undeveloped areas. The Soviet Union is believed anxious to do something to halt this trend.

Workmen's Bill Due From House

SALEM (UPI)—Members of the House Committee on Labor and Industries decided informally Thursday to try to get out a workmen's compensation bill this session.

But they termed the Senate-passed bill before them "a mess." The House committee heard nearly four hours of testimony on a bill to overhaul the state's 50-year-old program of industrial accident benefits for injured workmen.

Labor and industry witnesses, who fought bitterly over workmen's compensation in 1961, indicated they may be closer than ever to a compromise.

Hearings Set
The House committee said it plans to hold a series of hearings to hear from all interested parties: Employers, labor, the insurance industry, the State Industrial Accident Commission.

Members also said they would like to visit the commission to see how claims are handled, and make similar inspections of how self-insuring employers, or private insurance firms, would deal with the injured worker.

Committee members conceded it would be a big job for the few remaining weeks of the legislature, which hopes to adjourn late this month.

The Senate bill abandons the state monopoly sought by labor. On the other hand, it provides for less private insurance than management would like. It would give employers three choices: Insurance through the state system, self-insurance for a "direct responsibility employer" who could afford to post his own bond, and self-insurance with the backing of a private firm.

An aerial photo interpretation school conducted by the regional Forest Service office at Portland was attended recently by Ernie Ellersiek, area engineer on the Umpqua National Forest engineering staff.

A student at that session, Ellersiek will switch roles and become teacher when he conducts sessions on this subject for the benefit of other engineering personnel.

New methods of aerial photography and photo interpretation were emphasized at the Portland Session. Training was given in use of the parallax bar and using photos in stereo pairs. Instruction was given on interpretation to determine timber volume estimates, identification of tree species, location of disease-infected or insect-infested forest areas and measuring tree heights from photos.

Directed Verdicts Favor Defendants

Directed verdicts favoring the defendants Erma F. Johnson doing business as Modern Beauty Salon, and Equitable Savings & Loan Association were returned by Circuit Judge Charles S. Woodrich Thursday, at the conclusion of a two-day jury trial.

The suit was brought by Ruth Hughes. She sought $14,250 general and $1,094.70 special damages for injuries allegedly suffered in a fall as she was leaving the beauty parlor May 19, 1962.

The beauty salon is located on SE Main St. in the Equitable Building. The plaintiff claimed negligence on the part of the defendants, because of an alleged slick place on the floor, and the fact the floor was sloping.

She claimed her injuries, including a broken leg, were of a permanent nature.

The trial opened Wednesday and the taking of testimony was concluded at 1:30 p.m. Thursday. At the close of testimony, attorneys for both defendants moved for directed verdicts, and they were allowed by Judge Woodrich. Judgment order was issued allowing them to recover their costs and disbursements.

Song Festival, Dinner Open To Public At Fairgrounds

The Methodist Churches of the Umpqua Valley are inviting everyone who enjoys singing to attend the Aldersgate Family Festival this Sunday at the Douglas County Fairgrounds in Roseburg.

The program for the day will start at 2 p.m. with a substantial Sunday meal prepared by the members of the churches at Drain, Yoncalla, Sutherlin, Wilbur, Roseburg, Winston-Dillard, Tennile, Camas Valley, Myrtle Creek, Canyonville and Days Creek, all coordinated by Bill Kissinger and the members of the Roseburg church.

The tickets for this meal are on sale at all Methodist Churches.

Following the meal, the song fest will begin, led by guest song leader, Bob Gibb, who comes here from the Methodist Cathedral of the Rockies at Boise, Idaho. Everyone will join in singing the songs accompanied by Mrs. Paul Geddes at the piano and Vern Reynolds at the organ.

Included in the program will be several special numbers, to give the singing congregation a chance to catch its breath. The special numbers, which will be spaced throughout the program, will include a duet by Mr. and Mrs. William Peckham of Roseburg, a tenor solo by Dr. Glen Gordon of Eugene, and the Bell Ringers of the Roseburg Methodist Church, which include Mrs. Leo Gillett, Mrs. Emmett Gibbons, Mrs. Jack Adair, Mrs. Warren Burrill, Mrs. Clarence Colegrove, Mrs. E. A. Smith, and their director, Mrs. James Jenkins.

The theme song for the Aldersgate Family Festival will be the song made popular by the Billy Graham crusades, "How Great Thou Art." This song, according to Time Magazine, is a popular blending of new words and old music. The words were translated from the Russian in 1958 by Stuart to an old Russian folk melody.

The Festival is being held in commemoration of John Wesley's "Aldersgate Experience" 225 years ago. It is held on May 5 in order that families from all over the county will plan to be together for a great hymn sing at the beginning of National Family Week, according to the Rev. Eugene Groves, publicity chairman.

Days Creek Woman Is Injured In Accident

A 1963 automobile operated by Edith Irene Bush of Days Creek, suffered considerable damage and she suffered a cut left arm, when her car struck a state Highway Department scoopmobile.

The accident occurred on the north slope of Roberts Mountain, on the Highway 99 Freeway. The scoopmobile, with warning flags posted, was sitting across the jungle bars and partially in the southbound lane.

The state police report said Mrs. Bush was attempting to pass a string of cars, traveling north in the northbound lane, saw the scoopmobile but was unable to avoid hitting it.

A flagman jumped clear. The impact tore off the car doors and damaged the fenders and a part of the roof on the left side. She was wearing a seat belt, officers pointed out.

New Chamber Program Aim At Attracting Industries

The Roseburg (area) Chamber of Commerce's Payroll Development Committee is working to ward an early announcement of the first "industry of the month," in a program aimed at bringing in new or expanding existing industries.

The group has a partial commitment from a local small-scale industry, which has the potential of considerable expansion if studies prove this feasible. The members hope to make this announcement within the next few weeks.

The committee, headed by Del McKay and Don Dole, met Thursday night in the Hotel Umpqua.

Local committee members and the two representatives made several visits about town during the day interviewing persons with business or industrial expansion potential. The committee primarily is working on expanding small industries, or starting new ones which will gradually add to the community's payroll. But is not overlooking encouragement for larger industries as well.

The members were enthusiastic in their approach to the problem and see several immediate possibilities. They hope to feature a new industry each month in a special promotion program.

Speaking at the weekly Roseburg Rotary Club meeting Thursday, Salmon said the Payroll Development Plan is designed to inform the public of what makes industry function and as a formal effort to consolidate efforts to improve industry.

He said the organization is a committee of idea men.

He said it has been estimated that by 1975, 10 million more people will be living on the West Coast than are now here. "These people mean industry," he said. He contended that 85 per cent of the new economic activity in a community develops from a local economic base. He said this is the tack being taken by the Payroll Development Committee.

McKay backed him on this by saying the dream of having some "great industry come in and save us" will never happen.

Salmon said recreation is one of the most potent products Douglas County has. It is one of the subjects being explored by the committee for boosting the economy.

He called for community support of the committee in its efforts to add new jobs.

Oakland Couple Visits Sugar Cane Plantation

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Bridges of Oakland were among 23 members of an Oregon Grange tour group who visited the Oahu Sugar Cane plantation and mill at Waipahu as guests recently.

The Oregonians were welcomed by officials of the cane sugar industry which is a major source of the 50th state's spendable income. Although Hawaii is the nation's largest producer of sugar, the officials pointed out, the state depends on the Pacific Northwest for one-third of the food and grocery products shipped to the islands.

Hawaii obtains more than $35 million worth of lumber, fruit, vegetables and other products from Northwest farms and factories annually, the Oregon farm group was told.
