

FBI Chief Blames Public Apathy For Rise In National Crime Rate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover blames public apathy rather than police inefficiency for the continued rise in the national crime rate.

There has been a 70 per cent increase in serious offenses in the United States during the past 10 years, Hoover said, despite better criminal detection in spotting offenders.

"A lack of public interest and support—particularly with regard to law enforcement and the administration of justice—underlies America's rising crime problem, the top G-man said.

In an exclusive interview with United Press International, Hoover looked back on a career as head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that spans an era from beer barons to atomic spies.

Now 68, Hoover is little changed since May 10, 1924, when he took over the Justice Department's old Bureau of Investigation.

He is a man dedicated to his job, and has done it well enough to last through six administrations. He has been threatened by the likes of gunman Alvin Karpis, but he captured Karpis himself. "I accepted Karpis' threat as a personal challenge," Hoover said.

When he is not directing operations against spies, murders, kidnapers, or any of a multitude of crimes that fall under FBI jurisdiction, Hoover relaxes in his garden.

Said Hoover: "If a man is to maintain his balance and proper perspective in life, it is essential that he reserve a few hours each week to pursue a hobby, to read good books, to enjoy the company of family and friends, and to commune with God."

The FBI under Hoover has come a long way since it was an obscure bureau in the Justice Department with a few hundred agents. Now its network stretches from Alaska to Puerto Rico, and more than 6,000 men carry the badge of a special agent of the FBI.

JFK Ignores Boeing Dispute In Talk To Machinists Meet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy said Sunday night that a "free, active, progressive labor movement stands for a free, active, progressive country."

Kennedy spoke before the 75th anniversary assembly of the International Association of Machinists, 800,000-strong and the largest union in the aircraft and missile industry.

The IAM will vote Friday on contract proposals with the Boeing Co. Kennedy has told IAM leaders that any strike against Boeing now "would have a serious impact on the defense posture of the nation."

The President made no mention of the Boeing dispute in his speech to 4,000 cheering guests at the IAM banquet. He went to the IAM shortly after returning by helicopter from Camp David, Md.

where he spent the weekend with his family.

Kennedy praised the IAM and the labor movement as representing a powerful force for progress.

Both the labor movement and the country in general have come a long way since their beginnings, he said, but there still is much unfinished business to be solved in the 1960s.

"The President said he was 'astonished' to see how difficult it was to get congressional approval of needed programs such as assistance for education, mass transit, and assistance for unemployed youths.

He said the IAM and the labor movement had every reason to be proud. He urged those who "find fault with the American labor movement in the United States today" to look overseas where often trade unions are controlled either by Communists or by governments.

But Hoover is not interested in extending his agency's power. There are very definite limitations on the FBI's authority, Hoover said, and "I consider all of them to be most essential."

Hoover gives credit to President Franklin D. Roosevelt for the present status of the FBI.

It was Roosevelt who made the most significant addition to FBI jurisdiction, Hoover said. In 1939, he named the FBI the civilian investigative agency primarily responsible for safeguarding America's internal security.

More Protests Planned Today In Alabama Racial Controversy

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)—Negro leaders, encouraged by the first march on city jail in a 31-day campaign that did not result in mass arrests, planned more protests for today while federal officials sought to ease the explosive racial situation here.

More than 2,000 singing, chanting Negroes Sunday marched six blocks from a Negro church to a park across from the city jail. They were permitted by police to hold a 15-minute demonstration aimed at bolstering the spirits of more than 1,200 Negroes who remain in jail for previous demonstrations.

about the negotiations. U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy canceled a weekend trip to keep an eye on the tense situation in this Deep South industrial center.

Negro leaders predicted students who began skipping school by the hundreds last week to take part in the drive would play hooky en masse today to participate in the protests.

Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who predicted complete success for the protest movement in a sermon in Atlanta Sunday, was back here today to spearhead the drive.

Comedian En Route

Negro comedian Dick Gregory, active in a recent Greenwood, Miss., Negro voter registration drive, was to arrive later today by plane.

Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor had police keep a tight rein on the march Sunday and set up barricades complete with fire hoses around the park, but the demonstration was not broken up.

Leaders in the campaign were elated over the march, the nearest thing to a victory in the campaign that has brought more than 1,500 arrests including many young children.

Professor To Give Program At Roseburg Woman's Club

The Roseburg Woman's Club will be host Tuesday at a program featuring George Hopkins, professor of piano at the University of Oregon.

en who are interested in becoming club members, with particular emphasis being placed on joining at this time because of a course in musical arts to be offered to club members in the fall. Tuesday's program by Hopkins will be on "Musical Exploration of South America." Long before the Latin-American countries were repeatedly making headlines in U.S. newspaper Hopkins was corresponding in Spanish with a number of Latin-American composers. This cultural and political interest grew into something of a specialty, resulting in some travel "south of the border" by Hopkins and the use of more Latin-American music in his programs. In addition to his teaching assignments at the university, Hopkins has found time to do considerable composing and to play concerts in the principal cities of the Pacific Coast states, Mrs. Carstens said.

The Roseburg program will consist of the presentation and discussion of the music from at least seven of these Western Hemisphere countries.

Western Solons Meet Roadblock In Effort To Change Land Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Western senators today ran into a new roadblock in their efforts to change laws under which 477 million acres of public lands are administered.

Interior Department officials, headed by Assistant Secretary John A. Carver Jr., appeared before the Senate public lands subcommittee to oppose a bill calling for the creation of a public lands appeal board.

The legislation, introduced by Sen. Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, would create a board to review decisions dealing with use of the public lands for homesteading, grazing, mining and other purposes. Gruening said it would help homesteaders and others to cope with the "bureaucratic jungle" of the Interior Department.

But Carver protested that the bill would take away some of the interior secretary's power to administer the public land laws and create even greater delays in handling applications for public lands.

Admitting that appeals under the current system sometimes had been handled with "bureaucratic callousness, superficiality and lack of imagination," Carver said he was taking steps to correct abuses. Gruening's bill, he said, would not solve basic problems and would "tend to thwart or defeat such administrative reforms."

Westerners on the Interior Committee, all cosponsors of Gruening's bill, said they were not committed to its exact provisions. But they said they saw it as a starting place to provide for appeals from any arbitrary decisions made by interior officials.

Subcommittee Chairman Alan Bible, D-Nev., and Sen. Milward L. Simpson, R-Wyo., complained of not being able to get copies of the department's unfavorable reports before the hearings. Bible said the committee staff had tried to get the information but that the reports had come "three minutes before we came into the hearing."

The Gruening bill would create a three-member board of land appeals within the office of the secretary of the interior. Appeals from decisions by the Bureau of Land Management or the Geological Survey could be made to the secretary and decided by a majority vote of the board. The bill also would allow for a hearing to be held at a location "convenient" to the appellant.

Appeals from decisions of the board could be taken to a U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Wildlife Discussion Due In Roseburg

Wildlife personnel from Western Oregon national forests and several other public agencies will convene in Roseburg three days this week for an annual consideration of mutual wildlife management problems.

About 40 officials will attend, reports Ray Hampton, recreation and lands staff officer for the Umpqua National Forest.

Representatives are expected from Mt. Hood, Siuslaw, Willamette, Siskiyou, Rogue River and Umpqua national forests. Others are expected from the state Game Commission, Fish and Wildlife Service, Bureau of Fisheries and Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife.

Sessions open at 8 a.m. Tuesday in the Coral Room of the Umpqua Hotel. The meeting has been planned by the wildlife section of the Forest Service regional office. Hampton said various wildlife management topics will be discussed, including the impact of high mountain policies on wildlife, effect of chemicals used in herbicides and insecticides on wildlife and problems connected with coordinating timber and watershed management at the forest level for the benefit of wildlife.

A field trip is scheduled Wednesday in the North Umpqua and Little River areas to observe wildlife management problems. The conference closes with additional discussion sessions on Thursday.

Famed Bearded Actor Succumbs

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Monty Woolley, the bearded actor famed as "The Man Who Came to Dinner," died today in Albany Medical Center Hospital. He was 74.

Woolley had been on the critical list since April 6 with a heart ailment. He was moved to the medical center from Saratoga Hospital about 20 miles north of here.

He had lived in Saratoga Springs, N.Y. for the past few years.

Born Edgar Montillion Woolley, in New York City, he taught for 12 years at his alma mater, Yale, before heading to Broadway.

Because of his chin foliage, he was nicknamed "The Beard." His most famous role was as Sheridan Whiteside in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." He originated the role on Broadway and later portrayed Whiteside in the movie version of the play.

It was a role Woolley perpetuated for years to the delight of movie, radio and television audiences—that of a white-bearded patriarch, with fierce blue eyes, at times clenching a cigarette holder between his teeth.

Woolley built his reputation as an irascible curmudgeon on the stage and screen. But he insisted he actually was "mild-mannered and easy to get along with."

That was in 1935, when he came to Hollywood to play Omar the tent inaker in "Kismet," his last major venture in the movies before retiring to New York.

Woolley, born Aug. 17, 1888, enjoyed a long success as a distinguished actor on stage and screen in spite of, or perhaps because of, his long and unusual beard.

"The Beard," first appeared in chin foliage in the Broadway hit "On Your Toes," in 1929. From then on, despite pleas of some film producers, he refused to shave off the magnificent beard and wore it in such films as "The Man Who Came to Dinner," in which he repeated his 1939 stage role that brought him his greatest success. The part was one of a self-centered, booming voiced egotist who resembled in part a famed theatrical critic and personality of the day, Alexander Woolcott.
