Of Unique People
A warm and candid account of the Old Order Amish way of life has been written by William Schreiber, who lives on the outskirts of an Amish community of east central Ohio.

In "Our Amish Neighbors," he describes the Amish home, bare of ornamentation and impeccably clean; he shows a congregation at worship in their simple meeting-house. He gives an account of some of the traditional customs of these people in their family life, court

MARKET TIPS

New Fresh Fruits, Summer Vegetables Now On Market

By LEROY B. INMAN
Business News Dept. Editor
New fresh fruits and summer vegetables are beginning to appear more and more in local markets. Early peaches, apricots, cherries, grapes, plums and blueberries are among items now available in limited amounts and at higher prices.

Merrill and Dixie Red peaches, on the market for the past couple of weeks, are becoming more plentiful with the market showing some signs of weakening despite good demand. The market also is easing on apricots out of the Stockton area.

Beauty, Burmese and Santa Rosa plums are all available now from the central California area. Also, a few nectarines are to be had. Cherries are just making their appearance.

Local strawberries now are on the market, along with berries from the Willamette Valley and a few from California. New crop grapes, including Pearlites and Cardinals are of very fine quality.

New apples are yet to appear, but winesaps and some delicious out of controlled atmospheric storage are still available. There is a good demand for oranges, the market being strong on the large sizes and easier on the smaller ones. The lemon market is steady. Grapefruit still is scarce, although new California whites are starting to show. Bananas remain steady, and a few other tropical fruits, including pineapples and papayas can be found now and then in local markets.

White Rose potatoes, often referred to as Shalters from the Shafter, Calif., area where they originated, are becoming more plentiful, the market easing. Old potatoes are practically a thing of the past.

The carrot market is steady out of Bakersfield and Salinas, the quality good. Portland and Oxnard, Calif., are shipping bunch turnips and Oxnard has very good bulk turnips. Portland also had a few parsnips left.

The dry onion market is strong, as this is a between season situa-ship and marriage, treatment of ailments and social gatherings. The Old Order Amish, with their horse-drawn buggies, old-fashioned way of dress and rejection of the 20th century and its gadgets are the largest distinctive settlement left in America. They are a God-fearing people with a good leavening of worldly wisdom—they are unparalleled horse-traders and believe in prosperity as well as in simplicity.

This is a truly understanding account of a brave people, but is not a defense, for as Schreiber concludes: "The Old Order Amish need no defense in an America jealous of its own liberty, dedicated to preserve individualism, and zealous in rigorous separation of church and state."

Just in time for the boating season is "The New Boatman's Manual" by Carl D. Lane. This is a standard manual on every phase of small-boat operation and handling, including government regulations, rules of the road, seamanship, coastal and inland navigation, maintenance and repair, safety and etiquette. In clear, concise language and with hundreds of illustrations, it covers every possible problem confronting the boatman both in coastal waters and on inland lakes and waterways.
