Milk Price Hearing Monday May Be A Farmer-Distributor Fight

By ZAN STARK

SALEM (UPI) — The hearing here Monday on Oregon's new milk price law is expected to erupt into a battle between dairy farmers and milk distributors.

Monday's will be the first of four hearings next week to implement the milk stabilization act adopted by the 1963 legislature. The law will set minimum prices to farmers.

Farmers naturally will battle for high prices, while distributors seek lower prices.

The hearing will be at 10 a.m. in the Capitol.

Other hearings will be held Tuesday in the Lane County courthouse at Eugene, Wednesday at the Curry County courthouse at Gold Beach, and Friday at the Baker community center.

Market areas and minimum prices will be the topics of the Eugene, Gold Beach and Baker meetings. The Salem hearing also will include testimony on fees farmers will pay to finance the new milk price control law.

Under the new measure, all milk handlers must secure permits by July 4. Marketing areas and prices for class 1 and 2 milk must be established by Aug. 3. Market pools must be in operation on or before Oct. 2.

K. W. Sawyer, chief of the milk audit and stabilization division of said the department will set the new minimum prices after evidence received at the hearings is reviewed.

A six-point formula will be used:

—The average price of manufactured milk in Wisconsin and Minnesota.

—Prices of class 1 and 2 milk in adjoining states.

—The cost of transporting milk.

—The prevailing price for manufacturing grade milk used in products which compete with products made from grade A milk.

—The available supply of milk in relation to consumption, and —The cost of producing grade A milk, including leveling of seasonal production to meet market requirements.

If either distributors or farmers object to the prices set by the department, the issue can be taken to the courts, Sawyer said.

Under the temporary price stabilization act which expired in January the minimum price was $5.86 per hundred pounds. Prices in many areas dropped 36 cents to $5.50 per hundred pounds on June 1.

Sawyer said he had not yet received much comment on the new law from producers or wholesalers.

"I expect I'll hear a lot of comment starting Monday," he added. All grade A milk producers selling milk in Oregon are covered under the law and handlers are prohibited from purchasing milk that has not been produced under a quota.

This means that out-of-state producers providing grade A milk to Oregon milk handlers will have to be assigned a quota.
