Research Center Important To County

The Roseburg Research Center moved into new quarters this month, and the establishment of a permanent home for the researchers can be considered a real landmark in county forest activities.

The new greenhouse and head house (a storage facility) was built on property turned over to the U. S. Forest Service by the Veterans Administration Hospital. It is a comparatively unimposing structure now, but is a start in the direction of greater forestry research in Douglas County.

The new building will be the site of a lot of studies which will benefit the county for many years. The first studies being planned are brush control and investigation of mixed pine-fir forests. The latter will involve work on drought resistance and growth factors of these mixed forests.

The importance of the brush study is to control brush so seedlings can get a start without having to fight through a tight curtain of brush. When areas are burned over or cut over, the first growth, and certainly the hardest growth, is brush. It forms a so-called "overstory" and new conifers are choked out or stunted. The research center will continue to search for ways of regulating this brush so the new trees can get a fair start.

The mixed pine-fir project will be designed to aid foresters in improving regeneration of forests after cutting.

These studies are vital to the improvement and continuation of the county's biggest economic factor.

But these studies are just beginnings. Many other problems must be solved to make the forests grow faster and better. The keys to these problems will be sought out and solved by research centers such as this one.

The new facility for the Roseburg Research Center is the starter unit of what is expected to become a more comprehensive facility in the future as money becomes available.

The operation here deserves community support in hurrying those funds along. As the facility becomes complete, more problems can be worked out by the scientists working there. And with every breakthrough made by them, the county and the lumber industry generally benefits.

California Needs More Water

Southern California is facing the threat of another water crisis within the next decade as the result of a U.S. Supreme Court decision.

The decision limits the use by California of waters from the Colorado River. This probably means Californians will again be looking covetously at Oregon's abundant water with hopes of siphoning some of it into the thirsty south.

Arizona took the question to the Supreme Court when it was found California was using more than its allotment from the Colorado, while the demands caused by great growth in Arizona were increasing rapidly.

The problem of who gets the water hasn't become acute yet, but if populations continue to explode in both southern California and Arizona as they have in the years since World War II, the problem will become critical soon.

California is currently building a $1.7 billion pipe line from the Feather River in northern California to the Los Angeles area which will alleviate some of the difficulty. But it's only a stopgap measure. The state has made previous overtures for use of waters from some of Oregon's rivers, and the pressure can be expected to increase.

Oregon should be on guard to protect its own water, which in many areas (such as along the South Umpqua) is inadequate to handle present needs, let alone those of the future.

A few experts started to do this right after World War II. As the years went by more and more joined the fold until today only a few die-hards stick to the book procedure. Furthermore, the records seem to show that those die-hards aren't really experts any more since their names never appear among tournament winners.

THE LIGHTER SIDE:

Snowshoe 'Snafu' Tests Endurance

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI)—This old cattleman had an unenviable knack of estimating the size of a herd, and when someone asked him how he did it, he said:

"There's nothing to it. I just count the legs and divide by four."

That's a joke, son, but I'm thinking that the Army might have done well to have used a similar system a few years ago when it was ordering snowshoes for the troops.

Somehow or other, it wound up with 4,000 more snowshoes than it needed, a situation that might have been avoided by counting heads and multiplying by two.

At any rate, on a spring day in 1958 the Quartermaster depot at Jeffersonville, Ind., advertised the 2,045 pairs of surplus snowshoes for sale.

The Army attempted to retrieve the snowshoes, but by that time most of them had already been resold to someone else.

Leonard Joseph, president of the company, said he had made arrangements to sell the snowshoes he bid for $14.75 a pair. He claimed that the Army had done him out of $12,644.41.

But when the matter was bucked to the U.S. comptroller general, it was ruled that the government was not responsible for Joseph's theoretical loss.

Congress now has before it a bill to pay Joseph $1,000 for his time and trouble as regards the snowshoe snafu. Regardless of how it comes out, I will credit him with commendable determination.

Someone less resolute would simply have gone out and buried himself in a snowdrift.

British Guiana Is Thorny Problem

By PHIL NEWSOM
In Georgetown, capital and port of British Guiana, the Soviet freighter Kirovsk finished the loading of 30,000 bags of rice and pulled out for a destination unannounced but believed to be Cuba.

Behind, it left angry and hungry demonstrators who charged the government with deliberately trying to starve them out in order to end a general strike.

Almost unnoticed in the press of other world events, Georgetown has been in the grip of a general strike for nearly two months.

It was called by the Guiana Trades Union Council in protest against legislation which the council charges would give the government Communist-style control over labor unions.

It was not a new situation for Prime Minister Cheddi B. Jagan, the American-educated dentist of East Indian extraction who used to call himself a Marxist but now declares that he is a Socialist. It was almost a duplication of another general strike which erupted against the Jagan government in February, 1962.

In that strike, 40,000 workers quit their jobs. Before it was over six persons were killed, scores injured and nearly $30 million damage suffered by property in mob looting and burning.

The immediate cause was a new government budget including new taxes which the unions charged would be borne mostly by the workers. But behind it also was resentment among the unions against government attacks on the unions and against union leaders and racial differences which color all Guiana affairs.

These differences are between the East Indians who work on the plantations in the countryside and Negroes who labor in the city.

Geis Plantation Support

Jagan draws his support from the plantation workers. In the city, the unions are anti-Jagan, anti-Communist and fearful of the results if Jagan ever heads up of a Guiana totally independent of Britain.

The unions are demanding Jagan's resignation.

Jagan made several visits to Cuba and has expressed admiration for both Castro and Nikita Khrushchev.

It is perhaps accidental that in his present extremity he also has received aid from Cuba. The government's import-export corporation announced last week that a Cuban ship, the Maria Theresa, had arrived with essential food and fuel supplies. The import-export corporation is the agent for all Cuban and Russian ships.

As for the United States attitude toward Jagan, it is in a position of being damned if it does and damned if it doesn't. It fears that Jagan might give the Reds their first solid foothold on the continent of South America. It has been wary of too much aid to Jagan but on the other hand would like to believe him when he says he believes in democracy.

As the present strike follows its course of violence, one conclusion seems certain. It is not likely to convince Britain or the United States that Guiana is ready for the total independence Jagan seeks.

FINDS ELECTION SWEET
COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI)—Becky Sweet was elected lieutenant governor of Missouri Girls' State Thursday, but Marilyn Kiss was defeated for governor in the same election.

Dear Abby! Face Wedding Bells!

In Days Gone By

— By ABIGAIL VANBUREN —

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were divorced ten years ago. We have both remarried. When we parted, I got custody of our children, a boy and a girl. I consented to let our son live with his father because the boy was older, and his father could give him more than I at the time. The complications: My son is being married. My daughter and I were not invited to the wedding. When I asked my son why, he said it would cause too much of a mix-up in the seating arrangements. My ex-husband's present wife is very jealous, and I think she had a lot to do with all this. Many of my friends will be at the wedding, and will wonder why I'm not there. I wouldn't want them to think I refused to attend my own son's wedding. What should I do? I want to see my son married.

DEAR HURT: Go to the wedding, sit on the groom's side and enjoy a mother's privilege of seeing her son married. And hold your head high and smile while you're doing it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old man who recently spent ten days in the hospital. I took a liking to a certain nurse, who led me to believe she was available. After leaving the hospital I sent her a dozen roses in care of the hospital. On the card I asked if I could see her. To my surprise, the roses were returned to my home during the night by an orderly, who claimed he was "going steady" with her. There was a nasty note from him attached to the roses. It was found by my parents and I was deeply humiliated. Should I pursue this nurse further?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Telephone the nurse and ask her point-blank if she is interested in seeing you. The orderly might have been out of order.

DEAR ABBY: You can tell Mrs. Wet Pillow for me that any woman who cries herself to sleep because her husband hands her a $20 bill and says, "Here, Honey, go buy yourself something for Mother's Day," needs to have her head examined. She should have MY old man. I have to buy a card for myself and beg him to sign it. Ask Mrs. Wet Pillow if she'd like a slightly used husband who's real good at keeping his nose wet.

WRUNG OUT

CONFIDENTIAL TO LUCKY LUCY: Divorce your business instead of your husband and try to make a real home for your family.

Howard L. Shoemaker, president of the Associated Farmers of Oregon, said in Hood River today it was a "swell break for the farmers" when he was informed the State Federation of Labor convention at Tillamook was considering a resolution asking a boycott of the agricultural group's members.

"The Associated Farmers and other farmer organizations and individuals are sponsors of an initiative bill to regulate picketing and boycotting of labor groups," Shoemaker said, "and this is just the kind of advertising that will help us most and at a time when such help is needed."

10 YEARS AGO

Julius Rosenberg and his wife, Ethel, walked quietly to the electric chair last night and were executed for the crime of delivering to Soviet Russia the secret of the atom bomb.

Neither of the condemned spies talked or attempted to talk, as the last moments came.

At the hour of retribution, crowds gathered, demonstrating, in New York, London and Paris.
