

Railroads Set Date For Rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's railroads announced today they will place new work rules into effect at one minute after midnight July 11 despite union warnings that such a move would trigger a national rail strike.

J. E. Wolfe, chairman of the railroads' negotiating committee, said union refusal to accept recommendations of a White House board has led to "a complete breakdown" in talks designed to end the dispute.

President Kennedy on June 15 asked both sides to undertake intensive efforts to settle the dispute until July 10 without changing the rules or calling a walk-out.

The new rules would result in elimination of thousands of jobs and make sweeping changes in working conditions for 200,000 men who run about 95 per cent of the trains in this country.

The railroads announcement came as Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz called in Wolfe and heads of the five rail unions to make proposals looking toward a settlement.

But Wirtz said no real progress had been made on key issues including whether firemen are needed in diesel locomotives in freight and yard service.

Wolfe said negotiations so far have been a "hollow mockery" of bargaining. But he told a news conference that today's announcement "does not preclude consideration of any constructive suggestions by the President, the secretary of labor or any other interested party."

He said the railroads have accepted recommendations from presidential boards but charged that the five unions have "adamantly refused to make any realistic concessions."

"The refusal of the operating unions to accept any part of either set of presidential board recommendations in the railroad featherbedding dispute has caused a complete breakdown in negotiations," he said.

Since every step under the Railway Labor Act has been exhausted, Wolfe said, the railroads notified the unions the new rules will be placed in effect at 12:01 a. m. Thursday, July 11.

Kennedy has warned that the nation cannot tolerate a paralyzing rail shutdown and said that he would seek legislation to prevent any such tieup of basic transportation facilities.

Senator Requests Closer Check On News Reporters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, vice chairman of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, called today for a closer loyalty check of American news reporters.

Dodd made the statement in conjunction with release by the subcommittee of testimony taken April 19, 1962, from Robert Taber, former Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) correspondent and a founder of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee.

Taber was questioned in closed session shortly after he returned from a year's stay in Cuba where he was wounded during the April, 1961, Bay of Pigs invasion attempt. He was employed at that time by the Cuban newspaper "Revolucion."

"Something To Ponder" "It is something to ponder," Dodd said in commenting on the testimony, "that a man like Taber would worm his way into a top position on the CBS staff, get himself assigned as CBS correspondent in Cuba in the period preceding the Castro takeover, and then have his totally pro-Castro presentations purveyed to the American public by one of our two great television networks."

"It is my earnest hope that the story of Robert Taber... can do something to persuade our news media that their correspondents can not be selected on the sole basis of their ability as newspapermen or cameramen or commentators—that it is their duty to the American public to conduct a somewhat closer check into character and basic loyalties than was conducted in the case of Robert Taber."

At the hearing, Taber denied for the second time that he personally received money from Castro officials for use in launching the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. The subcommittee has charged the committee is Cuban government's "chief public relations instrument" in the United States.

Denies Being Communist. Taber also denied being a Communist.

Taber was one of two CBS newsmen who smuggled television equipment into the Cuban mountains to interview Fidel Castro before he took over the island. He was not connected with CBS when he helped found the fair play for Cuba committee.

City Submits Answer To Airline Petition On Flight Schedule

The city of Roseburg has submitted to the Civil Aeronautics Board its answer to a West Coast Airlines petition for review of a CAB-denied request to overfly Roseburg on two afternoon flights.

The original application of the airline was for authority to overfly Roseburg on northbound flight 355 and southbound flight 322. West Coast contends it is losing money on its service here.

After the denial by CAB, the airline firm submitted a petition for review.

The answer filed by City Attorney Paul Geddes for Roseburg contends that the record of passengers making flight from Roseburg is not a true test of the passenger generating ability of the city. The answer states that "schedules of West Coast Airlines have discouraged rather than encouraged" local passenger business.

The city's statement further points out that when West Coast Airlines service was first inaugurated some 12 years ago "the concept and primary purpose... was that of serving the area as a 'feeder line' and to provide local service. The apparent purpose at that time was one to supplement the main trunk lines of larger airlines."

"This concept... apparently has now changed to the point that West Coast primarily strives to compete with the trunk lines, rather than to serve its original purpose in supplementing them and serving as a feeder line."

"If this is true, that fact alone would constitute an explanation for at least a rather substantial portion of the decline of passengers emanating from Roseburg in recent years by reason of the fact that the schedules and services... in this community have been insufficient to meet local requirements."

"Of course, it is conceded that development of highway thoroughfares also has been a substantial factor in passenger decline. Nevertheless, any attempt on the part of West Coast to attribute

JFK Is Convinced European Trip Strengthened Defense Alliance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy returned to a business-laden desk at the White House today, convinced that his 10-day trip to Europe strengthened his hand in forging a more powerful Western defense alliance and in dealing with Russia.

Kennedy scheduled a Cabinet meeting at the White House after an 11-hour flight from Naples, Italy, to Andrews Air Force Base outside the nation's capital. His plane made a refueling stop in the Azores but he remained on board in bed and asleep.

He landed here at 1:33 a.m. EDT, and was whisked directly to the White House by helicopter. The Cabinet meeting was scheduled for 11 a.m., EDT.

Catches Up The Cabinet meeting was called primarily to give the President a chance to catch up on domestic affairs since he departed for Europe June 22, particularly developments in the civil rights crisis.

At the Cabinet meeting the President also was expected to give the administration hierarchy at least a capsule report on his personal diplomatic mission to West Germany, Ireland, Great Britain and Italy.

Kennedy's trip covered about 13,000 miles in his gleaming silver and blue Air Force jet transport, plus an assortment of helicopter hops and motorcades. He spent about 26 hours lying in Air Force One, his transport, plus nearly a dozen hours in helicopters.

Mobbed By Millions He was mobbed by millions in the metropolitan centers of the four countries visited, and he returned home relatively tired from long hours in the back of a touring car, standing and waving, and fielding everything from thorny rose bouquets to solid clumps of cornetti.

After spending July Fourth working at the White House, Kennedy hoped to erase some of his fatigue by relaxing with his family this weekend at his summer house in Hyannis Port, Mass.

He probably will hold a news conference next week, and may deliver a first-hand report on his trip to leaders of both parties in Congress.

A companion measure, which sets the penalty for first degree murder at life in prison, became law without the signature of Gov. Mark Hatfield. It becomes effective if voters approve the constitutional change.

Dr. Ward Must Stand Trial, Judge Decides

LONDON (UPI)—A judge who heard lurid testimony from play-girls and their male companions today ordered society osteopath Dr. Stephen Ward to stand trial on charges of living on immoral earnings in Britain's sex-and-security scandal.

The 50-year-old Ward pleaded innocent to the charges against him. His lawyer said Ward would reserve his defense for presentation in court later.

The judge's ruling came on the third day of a pre-trial hearing for Ward, who was charged with eight vice counts, including aiding abortion, luring teenage girls into prostitution and living off earnings of prostitutes.

Ward, the man who introduced playgirl Christine Keeler to former War Minister John Profumo and touched off a scandal that rocked Britain, was granted bail of $5,000. The bail was covered by two sureties of $2,800 each — one of them put up by Ward's literary agent, Pelham Pound.

The court ruling came after a middle-aged mystery man testified he had sexual relations with Miss Keeler in Ward's apartment and found her to be "an amusing companion."

Owner Needed For $1,241

District Attorney Avery W. Thompson has $1,241 he doesn't know what to do with. It's not that he doesn't want the money, but it doesn't belong to him or his office. He's not sure just who is the rightful owner, so has filed suit in Circuit Court to have ownership decided legally.

The money belongs either to George Thad Thompson, proprietor of the Drain Drug and Variety Store, or to Maynard Fred Edwards, or Mena Kim of Los Angeles.

The money was found in the car of Edwards and Miss Kim on May 12, 1962, when they were stopped by state police near Grants Pass, after George Thompson reported a like sum of money was missing from his store. He told officers the money was counted and sacked ready for banking.

Subsequently, Edwards and Miss Kim were arrested for larceny of the money and indicted by the Douglas County Grand Jury. A "not guilty" verdict was returned on trial of Miss Kim in Circuit Court here.

However, Edwards has not been made available for trial, because he currently is serving time in a California prison, and authorities there will not release him for trial. Exoneration of Miss Kim does not exonerate Edwards nor release the money, so the case pends.

Meanwhile, the money in question remains in the hands of the district attorney, where it was placed after being offered as an exhibit in the trial of Miss Kim.

The district attorney, in his suit asks a decree of the court permitting the plaintiff to interplead and requiring the defendants to come forth and specify their claims. The money is tendered into court, for the determination of who is entitled to it.

George Thompson and his wife already have a civil suit pending asking recovery of the money.
