

Briton Femme Fatale Is Target For Eggs

LONDON (UPI)—Dr. Stephen Ward, admitting that he is a "thoroughly immoral man," testified today at his vice trial that he thoroughly disapproves of any woman who takes money "for sex alone."

Ward, whose introduction of play girl Christine Keeler to War Minister John Profumo opened the door to Britain's sex and security scandal, was called to the witness stand as the defense opened its case in Old Bailey Court.

His attorney described him as a "highly sexed man who has had affairs with a great many women." Ward, osteopath, artist, and 50-year-old playboy, agreed that he was "thoroughly immoral."

He began his testimony shortly after Miss Keeler, 21-year-old red-haired call girl, testified for a second time and then ran the gauntlet of a jeering, hooting crowd of more than 1,000 persons as she left the court. Two eggs were thrown at Christine, but they missed, and she was unharmed as police held back the crowd and hustled her away in a taxi.

Introduced To Profumo
Beginning his story of the scandal that threatened to topple the British government, Ward said he was introduced to Profumo by Viscount Astor, owner of the famed Cliveden estate where Ward maintained a cottage.

The subsequent affair between Christine and the war minister after they met at Cliveden resulted in Profumo's resignation and an uproar against the Conservative government of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. As the scandal spread, Ward was brought to trial on charges of living on the immoral earnings of Christine and of seducing young girls into a life of vice.

Under questioning by defense attorney John Burge, Ward said he did not feel that Christine was a "prostitute."

"It all depends on what you mean by a prostitute," he said. "If you simply mean a woman who sells her body—that would apply to any woman who married for money."

"I myself thoroughly disapprove of any woman who takes money for sex alone."

Ward, who said he had had many distinguished mistresses as an artist, testified that he has been a friend of Lord Astor, 55-year-old son of American-born Lady Nancy Astor, for 12 years.

"We are great friends and we are on very close terms," he said, adding that Lord Astor had helped him financially from time to time.

Paid Nominal Rent
Ward said he paid a nominal rent of only one pound ($2.80) a year for a cottage on Lord Astor's estate. It was while she was a guest at this cottage that Miss Keeler took a nude moonlight dip in the swimming pool on the grounds and met Profumo.

Another of Ward's guests at the cottage was Capt. Eugene Ivanov, Soviet naval attaché and also one of Miss Keeler's trollicsome friends. The fact that she had the British war minister and a possible Russian spy as playmates at the same time led to a security debate in Parliament.

In preceding Ward to the stand, Christine, a prosecution witness who was summoned by defense that Ward once took her to the police and asked them to make her quit smoking marijuana cigarettes and to stop running around with colored men from the West Indies.

THIS 75-POUND terracotta eagle which has overlooked the city of Portland, since 1928, was presented Monday to the winner of the Oregon Mutual Savings Bank "Why I should have the Oregon Mutual eagle" contest in a ceremony at Portland's city hall. Shown examining the relic from Portland's past are (left to right) Mrs. Fred Bowman, Yoncalla winner of the contest; W. H. Ragsdale, Oregon Mutual president; Felix Latino, mayor of Yoncalla, and Terry Schunk, mayor of Portland.

Yoncalla City Hall Will Get The Bird

The city of Yoncalla is going to get the bird, so-to-speak. The bird is a weather-beaten 75-pound terracotta eagle that stared down on downtown Portland for 35 years. It will find a new home adorning the Yoncalla City Hall.

In a ceremony Monday afternoon at the Portland City Hall, the "bird" was presented to Mrs. Fred (June) Bowman, city recorder of Yoncalla, by Portland Mayor Terry Schunk. Mrs. Bowman was declared winner of the eagle in a contest conducted by Oregon Mutual Savings Bank.

When workmen renovating Portland's Broadway - Oak building, which will be the bank's new home late this fall, removed two eagles (one was wrecked) the bank decided to give one away. The contest, according to W. H. Ragsdale, Oregon Mutual president, was limited to 25 words or less on "Why I should have the Oregon Mutual eagle."

Important Symbol
When the bank decided on the eagle-give-away contest, little did an official dream that the eagle as a symbol meant so much to so many people. Indians named Yoncalla, which means "home of the eagles." But it developed that Centennial High School of Portland has an eagle as a mascot; so does Hudson Bay High School at Vancouver, Wash.

One woman in Salem sent in an entry, giving her reason for wanting the eagle: "I'd present it to my husband who has been giving me the 'bird' for 22 years. That ought to stop him."

Entries flooded in from Yoncalla. The Yoncalla School Board passed a resolution wanting the eagle. Little Leaguers wrote in, there is a scrawled collective entry from a kindergarten class. One member of Oregon's famed pioneer Applegate family sent in an entry, with a postscript: "We were here before the Indians!"

Two Nabbed After Fight

Roseburg City Police took into custody two youths charged with disorderly conduct for fighting. They were listed as James LeRoy Munion, Rt. 2, Box 440, and Lee Lane Pocock.

The arresting officer said that while he was stopped on patrol in Stewart Park near the YMCA, he saw a pickup pull up. The occupants got out and started fighting near the tennis courts. They stopped for a while and resumed before the officer could get to them.

History of the fossilized fowl given away is vague. The two eagles were originally placed on the Broadway-Oak building when the structure was constructed in 1928. The pair sat atop pillars and guarded the main doorway of the building facing Broadway.

Portland architects Burns and Hilgers have no plans for any eagles in the new bank building—except on money. Oregon Mutual plans to occupy the first and second floors of the building by Nov. 15. The bank purchased the building in 1958.

No Move Made By Cuba Against U.S. Embassy

HAVANA (UPI)—The government has taken no action so far to enforce its order nationalizing the U.S. Embassy building here.

Work at the embassy proceeded normally Wednesday, with people coming and going on routine errands as they would on any other day.

Since the United States broke off diplomatic relations with Cuba in January, 1961, the embassy offices have been used by Swiss diplomats handling U.S. affairs in Cuba.

Cuban officials asked the Swiss Wednesday to vacate the building. Informed sources said the Swiss Embassy protested both the nationalization and the request that they leave, and for the time being they remained in possession.

B. C. Trollers Resume Fishing

Some 3,000 British Columbia troller fishermen resumed fishing Wednesday and today, leaving about 6,000 net fishermen and allied workers still on strike.

Pacific Trollers Association Secretary Rennie Stanton said the trollers are fishing for salmon off the west coast of Vancouver Island and will market their catches in Seattle.

Mr. Stanton said American trollers informed the Canadian group that they had no objection so long as the B. C. fishermen did not undercut U. S. prices.

The trollers were forced to stop fishing when the United Fishermen and Allied Workers went on strike, resulting in the shutdown of marketing operations in Canadian west coast ports.

Meanwhile, the last boats from Oregon and Washington coastal ports put out to sea today in quest of salmon. A spontaneous strike by independent fishermen ended Tuesday when buyers raised the price of silvers seven cents to 32 cents per pound.

Many of the boats returned to fishing Wednesday, but some remained in port because of threatening weather or to stock up on ice.

A price also was set for albacore tuna Wednesday when Fran Hoagland of Bumble Bee Sea Foods announced his company was paying $300 a ton for tuna delivered to the Astoria cannery.

Simmons Firm Hit By Federal Complaint

PORTLAND (UPI)—The federal government Wednesday took action to curtail the five-state operations of the Charles Simmons Institute.

Acting U.S. Attorney Sidney Lezak filed a complaint in Federal Court here asking an injunction against operations and stock sales of the institute and seven allied corporations. Lezak requested the firms be frozen and placed in receivership.

Shooting Probe Short On Leads

GOODING, Idaho (UPI)—Officers were short on leads here today as they continued efforts to solve the shooting death of a Portland, Ore., salesman near Hagerman Monday night.

The victim was positively identified Wednesday as Richard A. Herald, 31, of Portland. The identification was made by Herald's employer, George Owen, Portland.

Sheriff Keith Anderson said he has no more leads in the case. "We're hoping for information from some motorist who may have been passing by when this occurred," Anderson said.

Herald was found in his pickup truck at a roadside rest area on U. S. 30 near Hagerman. He apparently was shot twice in the head while asleep. The sheriff said robbery probably was the motive.

The complaint, charging violations in security sales and deals including diversion of investment funds for personal use, was brought under the Federal Securities Act.

Show Cause Order Issued
Federal Judge Gus Solomon ordered the firms and six individual defendants to show cause July 31 why a temporary injunction should not be issued.

Federal authorities indicated the complaint climaxed three months of investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission of Simmons' $1 million operations in Oregon, Washington, California, Arizona and Texas.

La Pine Acres Head Named
The defendants, in addition to Simmons, are William F. Gressinger, Portland, an associate in conducting Simmons' lectures; Charles M. Simmons II, Los Angeles; Richard L. Longenecker, Cle Elum, Wash.; Francis A. Butterworth, San Jose, Calif., president of La Fine Acres, Inc., near Bend, and Douglas C. Shepherd, Los Angeles.

Corporations charged in the complaint were Human Relations Foundation, a Washington corporation; Simmons Institute, Inc., a California corporation; Simmons Institute of Seattle; Educational Corporation of America, an Oregon group; University Village, Oregon Inc.; Transamerica Property Corp.; La Pine Acres, Inc., and Universal Mortgage Co., Los Angeles.
